Supreme Court Affirms Validity Of N.Y. Job Law

Act for Unemployment Insurance Upheld by 4-4 Decision. Justice Stone, III, Fails to Cast Vote Federal Legislation Not Involved; Wide Power Granted States.

By Robert C. Albright. A rare division of 4 to 4, the United States Supreme Court upheld the validity of the New York State unemployment insurance law yesterday in a decision that left the Federal social security law untouched, but dealt States a wide latitude in legislating for unemployment.

It was one of those unusual decisions in which the court was evenly divided and a lower court ruling automatically was affirmed.

Ill with dysentery, Justice Stone did not vote, and the remaining eight justices did not disclose how they individually cast their ballots.

It was assumed Justice Hughes and Justice Roberts voted with Justices Cardozo and Brandeis to uphold the State law. The liberal Stone, had he been present, probably would have voted the same way, to make the decision 5 to 4.

Announced Orally. No written opinions were handed down. The Chief Justice merely made the 13-word announcement.

The judgments in these cases are severally affirmed by an equally divided court.

Although the New York law was supplementary to unemployment insurance provisions of the social security act and a model for much other State legislation, attorneys had been careful to argue that the State law would "stand on its own" and the Federal law was not involved.

But the New York law is sufficiently like the Federal statute in pattern to make yesterday's decision an important augury of how close the division might be when the social security act is directly challenged in the high court.

John G. Winant, chairman of the Social Security Board, viewed the decision as "clearing" the existing legislation. He said he hopes, as a result, that "all of the States which have not yet secured for their employees the unemployment compensation benefits and for their employers the tax advantages made possible by the social security act will now proceed quickly to secure these benefits through enactment of the necessary legislation."

Sixteen States and the District of Columbia already have enacted unemployment insurance laws conforming with the social security act. The Social Security Board estimates some $8,000,000 in benefits are protected, but millions of other workers still remain uncovered.

Board Ready to Assist. Winant seized on yesterday's decision to announce that "the Social Security Board stands ready—involvement in any State—to give every possible assistance in the formulation of an unemployment compensation law which will both meet the local requirements and conform with the national security act."

Thomas H. Elliot, general counsel for the Social Security Board, made the decision, "although that of an equally divided court," indicates that "at least in their major provisions, the various State unemployment compensation laws satisfy the Fourteenth amendment."

The New York law provides payment of 16 weeks of unemployment benefits to jobs insured industrial workers from a pooled insurance fund collected by taxing all employers of four persons or more at rates of 1 per cent of their total pay roll this year, 2 per cent next year and 3 per cent annually thereafter. Benefits would be paid until 1938. Payments will be based on 50 per cent of the full-time weekly wage, with a minimum of $5 a week and a maximum of $15 of one a week. With 76,000 firms employing 2,500,000 persons contributing the fund is now above $20,000,000.

Three Complainants. Three firms challenged validity of the State law—Associated Industries of New York State, Inc., and E. C. Stearns & Co., of Syracuse. The district court held the law unconstitutional in the Associated Industries case, but in the Stearns and Chamberlain case the Federal district court held the law valid except for a provision granting jobless benefits when an employee left employment as result of misconduct, industrial dispute or strike.

Holding the State did not take property without due process of law, the New York Court of Appeals, which was affirmed yesterday by the Supreme Court, ruled the State law constitutional.

Before taking a two weeks' recess, the high court yesterday agreed to review the case of Angelo Herndon, Cincinnati colored Communist organizer, who was sentenced to an 18 to 30 year chain-gang penalty by the Georgia courts in 1932 under an old reconstruction day statute prohibiting "insurrection."

Once before his case had reached the Supreme Court, but was referred back to the Georgia courts because it had not been presented in proper form. Twice the Georgia Supreme Court had affirmed the

Foe 'Too Busy' To Fight Sarga; Duels Delayed

Clerk's Nine Battles to Clear His Honor Scheduled to Begin Today.

Budapest, Nov. 23 (AP)—Business before tonight caused postponement of the first of Dr. Franz Sarga's nine scheduled affairs of honor until tomorrow.

The court of honor granted the second delay in the duels after one of the men Sarga charged with slurring his and his wife's honor pleaded a pressing business engagement would prevent him from accepting the invitation of Dr. Sarga for tonight.

Besides, the court of honor was disturbed at the medical reports on three of Sarga's opponents who, their doctors said, were not quite up to the rigors of lunging at the sturdy Sarga with 8-pound cavalry sabers.

Under the complex formalities of Hungarian dueling each contestant must have an affidavit from a doctor saying he is physically fit.

Dr. Sarga's opponent at the delay, but he is confident his knotty sword-arm would right his offended honor Tuesday.

Dr. Sarga's wife, Magda, relieved visibly at the delay, nevertheless voiced utmost confidence in her spouse's ability "to show them" a fair trial here.

Edith Maxwell Plea for Venue Change Denied

Court Rules Second Trial Will Be Held at Wise on December 9.

By Edward T. Folliard. A Star Correspondent. Wise, Va., Nov. 23.—Judge Ezra Carter today denied a change of venue for the second trial of Edith Maxwell, 22-year-old erstwhile mountain school teacher, charged with the slipper-slaying of her father, Trigg Maxwell, in their cabin near Pound, Va., more than a year ago.

Judge Carter handed down his decree from the circuit court bench at 5 p. m., thereby overruling the motion which had been brought by Defense Counsel Charles Henry Smith and M. J. Fulton on the ground that Edith could not receive a fair trial here.

Date of the second trial was set for December 9 by Judge Carter. Edith, who had been nervously wringing a handkerchief throughout the hearing, turned pale at the decision. She had prayed she would be tried elsewhere.

Wearing a russet-colored suit, she sat at the same table where a year ago she was stunned when a jury found her guilty of first-degree murder. She was sentenced to serve 25 years in Virginia State Penitentiary for Women.

Pleads "Defense." She had pleaded that she struck out with the slipper against Trigg Maxwell, her father, while he was drunk, was beating her and threatening to kill her.

Two months ago the Virginia Supreme Court of Appeals set the 25-year sentence aside, saying it was not justified by the evidence, and ordered a new trial.

The courtroom was crowded today, just as it was a year ago when a jury of mountaineers found Miss Maxwell guilty. There were coal miners present, some of them with grimy faces. There were old men whose chins frequently fell on their beards as they took cat naps. There were half-dozen women with infants in their arms.

Cows wandered along the streets outside. Smith, who offered his legal services after readers of The Washington Post went to the girl's defense, Fulton, and A. T. Dotson, Edith's uncle, contended in court today that Edith could not hope for a fair trial here in Wise.

They backed up their arguments by presenting a petition and 69 affidavits.

Gang Kidnap Army Sentry At Fort Myer

Series of Abductions and Holdups Here Cited; Head Identified.

Copyright, 1936, By The Washington Post.

Aroused by the abduction of an armed sentry from his post at Fort Myer, Va., Federal authorities have turned "G-men" loose on the trail of a new bandit gang which has been operating for the last week, it was learned last night.

Led by the "kid brother" of a slain District gunman, the robber band, armed with the sentry's automatic and 14 rounds of ammunition, has been preying on trusting couples in parked cars.

Audacity of the bandits in invading a military reservation and driving away with soldier in plain weapons with which to continue their depredations incensed War Department officials and created in the Department of Justice a wholesome respect for the potential menace of the gang.

Working at top speed, Department of Justice agents obtained "snaps" of pictures of several suspects. These were shown to the victims and it is known that one of them was identified as the leader of the new gang.

Soldier Identifies Leader. The identification was made, it was learned, by Private Frank Ayers, 20, of Company E, Third United States Cavalry, who was "snatched" from his post in a strategically important sector of the Fort Myer reservation and stripped of his .45-caliber automatic, 14 rounds of ammunition, his cartridge belt and his spurs.

The Federal agents quickly established that the bandits, after throwing Ayers from their car near Rock Creek Park to hold up Walter T. Holt and leave him bound and gagged, while they drove off with his companion, Miss Virginia Ash, and his car.

The bandits next struck Friday night when they held up the New Hampshire Market, New Hampshire avenue and D street northwest, and obtained $389 from Michael Amaly, a New York City resident.

A few hours later the bandits, their leader nattily attired in riding boots and breeches, appeared on the Mount Vernon boulevard, where the Misses Mary and Thelma Shelton were parked with Gordon L. Riggles and James C. Steele, all of Fairfax.

After a brief struggle, the bandits bound and gagged them. The younger brother, Mantis, died December 12, 1933, at the age of 54 after a short illness. Physicians said.

Van Sweringen Dies on Train; Rail Magnate

Heart Ailment Is Fatal to Second of Two Famous Ohio Brothers.

By The Associated Press.

Cleveland, Nov. 23.—Oris P. Van Sweringen, who started his business career as a newsboy and, with his brother, Mantis J., lived to manipulate and control a $3,000,000 network of railroads and real estate, died today on a railroad trip to New York.

The noted financier, who wrote an incredible chapter in the story of twentieth century transportation, died after a heart attack as his train approached Hoboken, N. J. He was 57 years old.

It was less than a year ago that his brother, Mantis, died in Cleveland in the midst of their struggle to pull their railroad empire out of the depression.

A. F. L. Votes Rebel Union Suspensions

Lewis Silent on Step; Formation of Rival Group Hinted.

By The United Press.

Tampa, Fla., Nov. 22.—The American Federation of Labor, after a long and heated convention floor fight, tonight suspended indefinitely ten "rebel" C. I. O. unions, hinted at more drastic future action and then appealed to insurgents to return to the family fold.

Punitive action against John L. Lewis, mine union leader, and his C. I. O. colleagues, was demanded and supported by the powerful craft union leaders who control the federation.

They comprise the majority of the federation's executive council which suspended the C. I. O. group in October on charges that the drive to organize mass production industries in large individual unions constituted "dual unionism" and "insurrection."

Freely Sought Ouster. John P. Frey, head of the Metal Trades Department, sought expulsion of the C. I. O. unions.

Charles P. Howard, president of the International Typographical Union and secretary of the C. I. O. warned 24 hours before the convention acted that the insurgents would set up a rival labor organization.

This would pitch the Nation into one of the greatest labor wars in the history of America. Lewis sent no official word to the convention, but to one of his friends he telephoned that the "council has a bear by the tail, let them handle the animal alone."

He offered to confer with the officials on the dispute only if the suspension against C. I. O. unions was lifted.

Committee Continued. The special committee of the council, set up to negotiate peace, will be continued, but the council was given authority to call a special convention of the federation to apply more drastic treatment to the rebels if a true fails and war between the two factions is intensified.

Charges that the council was using "dictatorial" methods were made by Howard, who although his union still is in good standing and he is a delegate, did not take his seat.

The resolution committee's report emphasized the council did have power to suspend recalcitrant unions. It will call later, however, that it was an implied power. His position was not clear.

In an address which swayed 1,000 Washington churchmen, Dr. E. Stanley Jones yesterday pleaded that the church forget mysticism and concentrate on the ills of man in its power to bring a wandering public back to the fold.

"More words won't do now," he said. "The patient is too desperate to wait."

Man has been hurt because his social order has been shattered by the impact of modern science. Man feels a strange sense of loneliness in a world where all values have gone to pieces.

He longs for something real on which to rebuild his confidence. "Communism is bidding for modern man's allegiance. So are the forces of fascism."

Religion as the savage man knows it now is too spiritual and not personal enough. Religion has turned its face from the earth to the heavens, it has promised to put a ticket in our hands for some place in the sky.

"Religion loves peoples' souls too much, and does not love mankind."

2 Hunters Brave Charge, Bring Down Wild Boar

Tellus Plains, Tenn., Nov. 23 (AP)—The vicious charge of a wild Prussian boar was stopped a few feet from two Knoxville hunters today after a three-hour battle.

Carry House, Knoxville automobile salesman, used his shotgun loaded with "pumpkin balls" to first down the 200-pound tusker at 75 yards. The boar rose from the woods slope of Beaver Dam Bald in a rage. Both House and his companion, Hugh Vandevanter, Knoxville cement manufacturer, opened up. He hog the only pure Prussian boar killed thus far in the hunt, had tusks 2 inches long.

Madrid Charges Nazis, Italy Aid Foe's Fleet, Patrol Spanish Coast

Fascism vs. Communism

Forces of Fascism and those of Communism, discarding subtlety, yesterday brought their world-wide struggle more into the open with the following developments:

The Socialist government of Spain, revealing an attack on the government fleet in Cartagena harbor, charged German and Italian warships were patrolling the coast of Spain.

Bitter reaction was expected in France, where the Blum government has been stormed with popular demands for scrapping of the nonintervention pact and French aid for the Spanish government.

Italy, backing Fascist insurgents in the Spanish conflict regarded as a proving ground for a greater test of strength between the opposing doctrine, announced it will give "moral support" to any blockade of Spanish ports by insurgents.

Germany, sidetracked for the moment from the struggle in Spain to play a larger game, admitted she and Japan had agreed on an anti-Bolshevik campaign. The already strained relations between Germany and Russia were further endangered by increased resentment in the Reich over the death sentence meted by a Soviet court to a German engineer.

Great Britain warned France she could not expect British aid if France becomes involved in war through supplying aid to the Socialist regime in Spain. British Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden told Parliament Britain is determined to prevent spread of the Spanish war—by force if necessary.

Shot and shell still rained into Madrid, and the United States—acting to protect its nationals—ordered the embassy at Madrid closed and Americans quartered there taken to Valencia.

In Moscow some officials openly state: "The new world war actually has begun in Spain."

Berlin Admits Embassy Staff Pact With Japan Ordered by U.S. Aimed at Reds To Quit Madrid

Engineer's Death Sentence Further Complicates Russian Dispute.

By The Associated Press.

Berlin, Nov. 23.—Germany today admitted she and Japan had agreed on an anti-Bolshevik campaign as charged by Russia last week.

A foreign office spokesman made the announcement, the first admission from Germany that the Russian assertions were true.

The spokesman said, however, that there was no written agreement between the two nations, and that therefore, a pact, in the diplomatic sense of the word, did not exist.

Observations awaited the Russian reply to the second formal German request for clemency lodged with the Moscow foreign office today.

Propaganda Minister Paul Joseph Goebbels, meanwhile, carried on through the Nazi press a bitter anti-Russian tirade.

Respite Sought Again. Moscow, Nov. 23 (AP)—German Ambassador Count Frederich von Schulenburg tonight for the second time asked N. V. Krestinsky, vice commissar for foreign affairs, to spare the life of Emil Ivan Sticking, German engineer condemned to be shot Sunday for plotting to wreck the Kamovskaya Siberian mines.

The results of today's conversation were not divulged, but German sources evidenced more optimism that Sticking will not die.

Three More Countries Join In Money Stabilization Accord

By Sidney Olson.

The United States last night "took another step toward international stabilization," according to Secretary Morgenthau yesterday, to permit shipment of gold to treasuries of central banks of countries co-operating.

This was done to allow Belgium to enter the accord, as that country has no stabilization fund.

No private institution or individual now may ship gold out of this country. They may import it, although it flows directly to the United States Treasury on arrival.

Following a session of several hours with Securities and Exchange Commission Chairman James M. Landis and Federal Reserve Board members, the Treasury announced that the board of governors of the Federal Reserve system.

Germany Accused Of Mining Harbor

Insurgents' Lines Hold Before Furious Drive of 30,000 Troops.

By The Associated Press.

Valencia, Spain, Nov. 23 (Reuters). The Spanish Socialist government definitely accused Germany and Italy today of aiding the Spanish Fascist fleet.

The declaration, made in a communique by the ministry of war, inferred Germany conducted an attack on the government cruiser Miguel de Cervantes in Cartagena Harbor yesterday.

The statement also asserted a German cableship was responsible for mining of the port of Bilbao.

Coast Patrol Charged. Valencia, Nov. 23 (AP)—The loyalist government charged tonight that German and Italian naval vessels have been patrolling the coast of Spain practically since the civil war began in a manner "at variance with duties imposed by neutrality."

The charge was made in a lengthy communique after a seven-hour cabinet meeting at which the ministers discussed at length the reported incident of torpedoing of the government cruiser Miguel de Cervantes in Cartagena Harbor yesterday.

The communique said submarines which attacked the Cervantes and other vessels in the harbor "must necessarily belong to foreign fleets."

The rebels have had no submarines at any time, all those flying the Spanish flag remained faithful to the republic.

"Among our shipbuilding centers only Cartagena, which is in our power, is in a position to construct this type of boat. The rebels therefore neither had submarines nor were they able to construct them."

Torpedo Pieces Examined. "The chief naval base at Cartagena has pieces of the torpedo which damaged the Cervantes. Italian torpedoes are the same as those used by the Spanish fleet."

"Examination of the material shows the torpedo was neither Italian nor Spanish, the type of screw differing considerably."

"After the abovementioned attack, approached the entrance of the port of Cartagena and, after port of Cartagena of the aggression, went away."

The 800-word government communique said the minister of marine and kindred industries, Prieto, to Cartagena yesterday and returned this afternoon, when he informed the cabinet of "a strange aggression at the entrance of the port of Cartagena of which various cruisers of our fleet were the object."

Fierce Battle Raging. Madrid, Nov. 23 (AP)—A terrific battle between the loyalist and insurgent forces started at 8 p. m. in the Casa de Campo and the Campo de Moros districts on the western side of the city.

Cannonading was deafening with an incessant underflow of machine-gun and rifle fire.

A tremendous explosion rocked the vicinity of the Puerta Del Sol in the heart of Madrid.

The firing began to diminish at 11 p. m.

For the second time within 24 hours the insurgents attempted to rush the loyalist defense lines on the right and left flanks, but each time were held back.

Loyalist artillery in Madrid pounded incessantly at the rebel line, while the invaders' shells could be heard whining above the city.

Thirty thousand militiamen were defending the western and northern sides of Madrid.

Take Refuge Under Ground. Thousands of civilians hunted refuge in underground retreats, fearing the rebel airplanes might take advantage of the clear night to pay another destructive visit such as that on dawn today.

Germany, Italy Patrol Coast, Madrid Claims be made about 40 miles southeast of here.

Evacuation plans call for fast motor service between Madrid and the rail head. It is hoped some 20,000 or 25,000 persons may be evacuated daily.

Officials believe between 300,000 and 400,000 women, children and aged men are willing to leave Madrid if the way can be found to transport them without crippling the city's war and food transport service.

A rebel airplane today barely missed blowing up the Spanish Loyalist general staff when it dropped a bomb squarely in the central patio of the war ministry.

It struck only 6 feet from the section of the ministry occupied by the general staff. It set fire to three passenger automobiles and three trucks and injured three workmen and a militiaman.

Rebel artillery on the outskirts of the city hurled four shells into the heart of Madrid. One hit squarely in the Puerta Del Sol and another only 30 feet from the American-owned telephone building.

The renewed shelling which began late today followed an air raid earlier.

Three bombers and a number of pursuit planes flew over the city at about 1,000 feet. After bombing the war ministry they dropped two other bombs near the so-called immune districts where noncombatants are supposed to be safe from attack.

Barrage Answers.

Loyalist anti-aircraft guns opened a terrific barrage against the invading planes which dropped their bombs and sped away.

Seventy-six corpses had been removed today from the debris which was a printing plant and a block of flats at the corner of the streets of Santa Anita and Costa Placencia before they were struck by a bomb last Tuesday.

Remaining Germans who had been refugees in their country's embassy left today for the Mediterranean coast.

Italy Backs Blockade.

Rome, Nov. 23 (AP)—Italy will give "moral support" to any blockade of Spanish ports by the insurgent regime, it was stated authoritatively tonight. Responsible sources added, however, that Italy would not extend material or military help to the insurgents, and would continue to pursue a policy of non-intervention.

Oviedo Reported Relaxed.

Embassy Staff Of U.S. Ordered To Quit Madrid

All Americans who stay in the capital will be free to use the embassy's facilities or to remain there if they choose.

No quarters have been engaged in Valencia for the staff, Secretary Moore said, but no difficulty is expected in this connection.

Private citizens who go to Valencia may be evacuated therefrom by the American naval vessels now constituting this country's European squadron.

Wendelin and his five colleagues of the embassy staff as listed as follows:

Eric G. Wendelin, Quincy, Mass., third secretary.

John D. Johnson, Highgate, Vt., consul.

Bolard Moore, Wellesley, Mass., vice consul.

Col. Stephen O. Fuqua, Washington, D. C., military attaché.

William Krieger, temporary clerk.

Gipson H. Malone, radio operator attached to the American cruiser Quincy, who was temporarily attached to the embassy.

In St. Jean-de-Luz, in France, Ambassador Claude G. Bowers still is maintaining temporary offices, as are the British and French ambassadors.

Nation-wide Housing Shortage Cited Among Most Serious of U. S. Problems.

By Franklyn Waltman

NO more challenging problem confronts the Nation than that supplied by the need for adequate housing, especially for the low-income classes.

Even though the depression has yielded to the forces of recovery—natural or stimulated—this particular problem has become worse and is now regarded as reaching serious proportions.

During the last week it has attracted widespread attention of Federal officials from the President down. All admit existence of the problem, either as the softest spot in the recovery picture, or as threatening "tragic consequences" as the result of a widespread housing shortage, or as a present-day social problem in which slums and overcrowding breed crime, immorality and ill-health.

But though the problem is recognized and the need for action conceded, there is a plethora of conflicting remedies proposed. So has it been throughout the depression period with a deadlock as the result. One group insists on the Federal Government housing program; another deplores such activity. One group asserts the answer is a reduction of costs by mass production methods; another holds this would destroy existing real estate values.

Langdon Post, New York housing commissioner, over the week-end told the American Federation of Labor that New York City is headed toward one of the worst housing shortages in its history and that the situation may have "tragic consequences." He contended that "sooner or later we must recognize that housing must be given to the people like education."

The National Association of Manufacturers' committee on housing and employment reports the need for concerted action to meet a housing shortage estimated at 6,000,000 units, but holds it is "a responsibility requiring the attention of all industry, all business and all interested in the creating and maintenance of a satisfied and effective citizenry."

This organization, as well as the National Association of Real Estate Boards in annual convention, "deplore the threat of Federal competition in the normal housing-building field."

President Roosevelt in a message of greeting to the convention of real estate boards explained he would "not be content until a sound housing program is established for the whole Nation," but gives assurance that "there is no need for city, State or Federal government aid in connection with housing which private capital can provide."

The executive council of the American Federation of Labor expresses alarm over the situation and points out that "only swift and decisive action can avert the impending housing crisis," and adds that "the inevitability of such a crisis, which no responsible student of the problem can seriously deny, brings out all the more forcibly our glaring lack of preparedness to meet it."

The executive council contends that 7,000,000 family units now are needed and that, with depression and obsolescence, approximately 14,000,000 dwelling units must be provided by 1945, or more than twice as many as were constructed during the entire boom decade of 1920-29.

High cost of housing is pointed out by the labor committee, but no mention is made of the shortage of skilled building trades mechanics of which contractors and the building supply industry have been talking recently. Even though the building boom—compared to the early depression period—now going on has absorbed much of the unemployment in the building trades, unemployment remains large in the durable goods industries dependent on construction.

Thus there appears to be no immediate end to the amount of housing required. There are many millions still unemployed in the country and there is a great deal of idle money in the banks. What is the answer to the problem? It revolves around the factor of cost. Reduce the cost of housing and the log-jam will be broken.

But how can that be done? There are a dozen schools of thought on the subject with all kinds of schemes. Building material men do not agree with the contractors and the latter disagree with organized labor. The sociologists disagree with all and assert that Government subsidies and Government undertakings are necessary.

Cannot the problem be solved and a way out of it formulated if the President would name a committee—a sort of Royal Commission—on housing, representative of the ablest men in the durable goods industries; in the building supply fields; in the building trades unions; in the real estate business and in mortgage financing enterprises, along with several of the outstanding housing authorities within and outside the Federal Government?

If such a group proceeded to work on the problem in an objective fashion, seeking a generally beneficial solution, rather than one to promote their own interests, a plan of action undoubtedly would emerge from their deliberations which would clarify public thinking and attract public support.

Chase Kennedy Is Dead at 77; Major General

World War Commander of 85th Division Had Long Army Career.

MAJ. GEN. Chase Wilmot Kennedy, U. S. A., retired, commander of the Eighty-Fifth Division during the World War, died yesterday in Walter Reed Hospital. He was 77.

Funeral services, with military honors, will be held at 2 p. m. tomorrow from the chapel at Fort Myer. Burial will be in Arlington National Cemetery.

Gen. Kennedy, veteran of the Spanish-American and World Wars, lived here in the Highland Apartments, 1914 Connecticut avenue northwest. He was a native of Portsmouth, Ohio, and was graduated from the U. S. Military Academy in 1883.

Following services at various posts throughout the country, he was promoted to the rank of captain in 1889 and was detailed to Cuba for duty during the Santiago campaign.

In 1900 Gen. Kennedy was recalled to the United States and sent to the Philippine Islands. He served there for two years and returned here for duty at various posts until he was again dispatched to the Islands.

Following rapid promotions, he was made a colonel in 1914 and entered the War College. After completing his course, he was assigned to the general staff at the War Department until 1917.

During his detail here, Gen. Kennedy was promoted to the rank of brigadier general. He commanded a camp at Gettysburg, Pa., and later, as a major general, National Army, he commanded the Seventy-eighth Division at Camp Dix, N. J.

In December, 1917, Gen. Kennedy went to France on an observation tour, remaining until February, 1918. He returned to France a short time later and took command of the Eighty-fifth Division.

Following the war he was detailed in the office of chief of staff. After serving at various other posts, including the Panama Canal Zone, he was retired with the rank of brigadier general in 1922. He was promoted to the rank of major general, retired, in 1930.

Gen. Kennedy is survived by his wife, Mrs. Elizabeth J. Kennedy, also of the Highland Apartments.

Mascot of Army Fliers Hit by Auto and Killed

New York Nov. 23 (AP)—Blackie, 17-year-old Army Air Corps dog mascot who was credited with more than 2,000 hours in the air, was killed tonight by an automobile in Hempstead.

The black and yellow spaniel, sired by a dog found by members of the first aero squadron on a French battlefield, and born at Mitchell Field, Long Island, was believed to have visited every Army flying field east of the Mississippi in the course of his travels with most of the present ranking Air Corps officers.

Housing Workers Strike.

Boston, Nov. 23 (AP)—Strikes of 200 union workers tied up work on the $5,000,000 Old Harbor Village low-cost housing project today. The strike, halting work for about 600 men, was called in protest of employment of about 50 WPA men on the village sewer project.

Belgian Rexist Makes Militant Bid for Power

Degrelle Seeks to Abolish Parliament, All Parties Except His Own.

By the Associated Press.

Brussels, Belgium, Nov. 23.—The chief of Belgium's Rexists—like Hitler and Mussolini—has forsworn humility.

"A chief must never shrink from his responsibilities under the pretext of humility," says youthful, magnetic Leon Degrelle, who rallied his Rexist party in Belgium's last elections to a resounding triumph that surprised and frightened older leaders.

"He who leads a task to a successful end wishes to and has a right to control its functions."

With these words Degrelle makes the newest bid for centralized authority in the kaleidoscope of European political patterns, using as his instrument a party with avowed aims similar to those of Fascist Italy and Nazi Germany—but not for the establishment of a totalitarian state.

Parallels Fascism.

Rexism parallels the powerful Fascist parties of Germany and Italy in wishing to "order" and "social peace reign," but there, says Degrelle, "the resemblance ends. The totalitarian state is repugnant to our temperament."

Degrelle's program calls for abolition of political parties and of Parliament as now constituted; control of big business and finance; strict neutrality and withdrawal from the League of Nations.

The Rexists take their name from the publishing house of the Young People's Catholic Action Society, youth movement begun in 1925—Christus Rex, or Christ the King.

Although denying that dictatorship would be established if his party comes to power, the handsome, well-built leader who patterns his conduct after Il Duce, cheerfully admits only he will be chief of the Rexist regime.

Degrelle receives his callers in a setting reminiscent of Premier Mussolini's headquarters in the Palazzo Venezia—a rooming house furnished with only "the chief's great desk and two chairs, so that visitors must traverse the full length of the room before reaching his presence."

The building that houses the Rexist organization teems with activity that Degrelle is confident will sweep him to triumph in the reign of Leopold II. Young adherents, identified by red and black armbands, rush in and out distributing literature, recruiting adherents, and organizing "cells" of Rexists throughout the small nation.

"The principal idea of Rexism is national renovation," Degrelle tells his visitors. "It is a question of saving the people by exalting their virtues. Belgium must live, but parties have suffocated what was most grand and noble in the country. Rexism would abolish all parties except 'Degrelle's.'"

Friendly to Monarchy.

Rexists not only are friendly to the monarchy but would "reinforce" the executive power and would "above all respect the Catholic religion, which is the religion of the immense majority of Belgians."

Other policies outlined by "the chief" include a progressive return to pre-war neutrality, economic union with the Netherlands, and friendly relations with all neighboring nations.

"There is no Semitic question in Belgium at the present time," says Degrelle, dismissing charges frequently brought by his opponents. "Perhaps certain foreign governments observe with sympathy Rex's growth while awaiting a triumph in the near future. This is very natural because we are contributing our share in the fight against communism. We do not receive any other encouragement from abroad."

No matter what Degrelle promises his followers in Belgium, he offers the United States no change in Belgium's stand regarding the $448,304,000 owed in war debts and private obligations. "War debts are interrelated and we pay when our debtors pay us. There is no place in it for sentimentalism."

To the powerful Flemish minority, Rexism has offered aid toward achieving some day their ambition of union with the Netherlands. The Flemish feel the tug of cultural bonds more strongly to the Dutch monarchy than to the throne of Leopold.

For the present the Flemish have agreed to abandon outright demands for separation from Belgium and to accept a federal state under the existing royalty. In return for Flemish aid, Rexism promises complete equality between Flemish and Walloons in language and culture, greater local self-government for the Flemish and dual ministries of education to insure equality between the Flemish tongue and the official French language.

Crusader Shows His Anti-Slum Movies To Federal Chiefs, Brands U.S. Laggard

Listening to Charles Forrest Palmer under full beam in his attack upon the slum evil root hitings up an image of St. George tackling the dragon.

Palmer is an Atlanta, Ga., real estate man. His business card says: "President, Palmer, Inc., Owner of Office Buildings, Palmer Building, Atlanta." But he was in Washington yesterday not on private business, but to continue the crusade against substandard housing which he has pursued with religious zeal since 1933.

Most of the Federal bigwigs concerned with slum clearance and housing—representatives of the PWA housing division, Resettlement Administration, HOLC, Park and Planning Commission, etc.—gathered yesterday in the Interior Department auditorium to view Palmer's anti-slum movies and hear him brand this country as a laggard in the "world's greatest movement."

In his 8,000 feet of film, made in England, Italy, Germany, the United States and other countries, he showed graphically how the rest of the world is outstripping this Nation in providing modern homes for the poor and low-salaried classes.

"The need in America is terrific," he said. "It is estimated there are 7,000,000 slum families, one-fourth of our population."

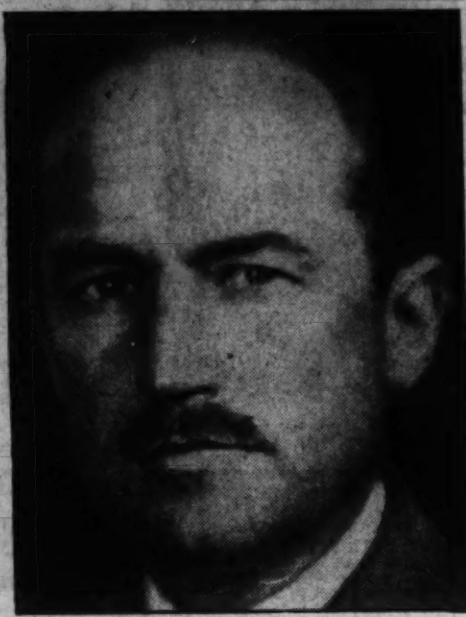

Within the last week Palmer, who three years ago took upon himself to slay the slum dragon, after viewing appalling conditions in the colored quarter near his Atlanta office building, has carried his crusade to Harvard, Princeton and Dartmouth universities, to the Boston and New York building congresses.

The situation in what was practically his back yard had the effect of a firecracker exploding under his chair. He organized the Techwood homes project in Atlanta, the first Federal slum clearance enterprise. He became a sort of housing missionary, spending thousands of dollars of his own on trips to see what other countries were doing for their alley dwellers.

He has gone abroad twice to inspect, ask questions and make pictures. He has been to Austria, Russia, Germany, Poland, Italy, England, the Netherlands and Scotland, even intemperate upon profits both by their virtues and their misdeeds.

"Twelve countries of Europe whose population totals over 130,000,000 people, have rehoused 20,000,000 of their citizens since 1918 with government aid. Our program will care for 200,000 or 1 per cent of theirs. In other words, we are 99 per cent behind the times."

He tells of a farm in Georgia where a two-room shack accommodates a family of 9—plus 15 boarders. "The day is fast approaching," says Palmer, "when our Government will compel cities to house their needy citizens properly, just as cities are now required to educate all children."

Underwood & Underwood.

He is contemptuous of "the selfish minority" who sell and rent "rotten housing." He points out that a Nation-wide slum clearance and low-rent housing program would benefit capital, labor—in short, every one and everything.

"Slum clearance," says Palmer, "conserves our greatest asset—the people themselves. If a function of the State is to husband our land, how much more a duty it is to conserve our people."

Let us make our part of this world at least as good as the rest as citizens let us study and understand housing and then help America achieve."

Palmer is 43 years old, a native of Grand Rapids, Mich., and a World War veteran.

Jones Asserts Business Must Back President As Bank Robber

RFC Chairman Says Chiefs 'Much Too Smart' Not to Support Him.

Business will support the President—its leaders "are much too smart not to," Jesse Jones, chairman of the RFC, declared last night in a radio address. Some of the business chieftains who "have been none too wise politically or with respect to our social questions," they "have their fingers crossed" but for the time being will be willing to bury the hatchet and help in completing the job of recovery, he asserted.

Insisting that the President has never been against business, Jones recalled the Chief Executive's statement that half of the industrial wealth in the country is controlled by less than 200 huge corporations, and added:

"It is certainly not to the best interest of our country that control of the wealth, industry and credit be concentrated in a few hands."

"Business has, in fact, been running too much to size for the general good, as have our credit agencies."

Unemployment Panacea. Of the unemployment problem he said that "if every family able to do so and every business of whatever nature would hire one or more persons in addition to those presently employed, the relief problem would soon adjust itself."

He held that recovery largely has been achieved, but while saying the Government should withdraw from the lending field as rapidly as private initiative will permit, warned that complete withdrawal by the Government is not advisable now.

"High interest rates and severe credit requirements would cause another setback," he said. "They would retard building and expenditures for capital goods in general, and would take away 'a feeling of security' in the knowledge that such agencies as the RFC, Federal Housing, Farm Credit and Public Works can, if necessary, provide credit."

Surplus Discussed. Pointing to extra dividends being paid by some corporations, which he said "may be misconstrued in determining the sound value of a stock," he reminded his hearers of the graduated surtax to which corporations now make themselves liable by failure to declare such dividends.

"If a corporation distributes all its taxable net income," he said, "it naturally will have an irregular dividend rate because its earnings will vary from year to year."

Lawyer Seized By U. S. Agents As Bank Robber

Former Liberty Leaguer Held in $30,000 Theft at Atlanta.

Spring, Colo., where he practiced from 1927 until 1934, snatched into the office of his old friend, Ernest Woodruff, president of the million-dollar Coca Cola Corporation, covered him with a revolver and demanded $30,000.

Under threats to kill Woodruff, Moyers compelled him to telephone to Thomas K. Glenn, president of the trust company, and request him to bring $30,000 in cash to the office.

A woman secretary and a guest in the office were forced to remain quiet while the banker was en route with the money.

When the door swung open, and Glenn appeared with the bills, Moyers forced him to hand them over. Then he instructed both Glenn and Woodruff to walk with him to the street.

"I'm a pretty old man and I've lived well," Woodruff said as he refused to move. "You'll have to kill me first!"

Glenn, however, went with the lawyer to the street.

Jamming against police lines were 20,000 men and women watching the blaze. In the height of their excitement they missed the bizarre drama that was being enacted before them.

Moyers slid into the crowd and at the time the Moyers said tonight they believed he had been made desperate and embittered by heavy financial reverses. They could give no other explanation for his actions.

3 Nations Join Pact to Insure Stable Money

Switzerland, the Netherlands, Belgium Will Adhere to 3-Power Accord.

Governor Marnier S. Eccles, Morgenthau announced the Treasury's "decks will be cleared" for board action after the first of the year. The Treasury is co-operating to the fullest extent with the Reserve Board, spokesmen said. The present plan of refunding February 15 notes on December 15, with no Treasury financing scheduled for January and February with the possible exception of bills, means the board will have a clear field for whatever action it may decide on, it was held.

Saturday the board indicated it may increase reserve requirements further, in order to reduce excess bank funds after the first of the year.

Further Increase Possible.

The board increased requirements by 50 per cent August 15. It can raise these requirements up another 50 per cent above the level existing before August 15.

This leverage against a possible runaway credit boom may not be exerted, observers pointed out, despite present indications. Sale of Government securities, to be bought chiefly by the banks, is another means of reducing excess reserves. With gold holdings at more than $11,000,000,000, excess reserves—the amount over the legal requirements to back deposits—now stand at $2,270,000,000.

Credit, figured at anywhere from $1 to $20 to $1, could make possible credit inflation on this basis up to $20,000,000,000 or more.

If reserves continued to pile up after the board had exerted its full powers, sale of securities would be an insufficient bar to a boom, many observers believe. On this premise they base a belief that further legislation, giving the board added authority over reserves, may be proposed at the next session.

The three new participants in the accord, Belgium, Switzerland, and the Netherlands, will be allowed "full privileges," said the Secretary. However, the three nations first making the agreement alone will pass on eligibility of other countries seeking to join the agreement.

Italy and Germany have not communicated with this country in the matter, Morgenthau said.

The clause allowing the United States to withdraw from the agreement on 24 hours notice, if such withdrawal is deemed in the public interest, is maintained in the agreement with the three new countries. Morgenthau said President Roosevelt had approved the accord the day before he sailed for South America, and that work had been proceeding on the agreement for a month before its promulgation.

60-Year-Old Man Drowns in Potomac

The body of a man identified as Timothy Donohue, 60, of Vienna, Va., was taken from the Potomac River near Thirtieth street northwest early yesterday.

Donohue formerly was employed by the Corson & Gruman Construction Co. A night watchman said he saw Donohue at the plant about 4:30 a. m., three hours before the body was found. Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald is investigating the case.

Wants to Be Leading Lady

Underwood & Underwood.

MRS. HELENE FORTESCUE REYNOLDS, yesterday demanded the leading role in the stage play, "This Pretty World," which her husband, Julian Louis Reynolds, is backing. Producer Johnny Walker told her she would have to be content with a minor role.

Helene Reynolds, of Fortescues, Wants Lead in Play, or Else—

Husband, Who Arbitrated When Wife Drove Off Butcher Truck in August, Again Called On to Make Peace as Walker Refuses to Yield.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

New York, Nov. 23. — "This Pretty World" was plunged into chaos at rehearsals today when Mrs. Helene Fortescue Reynolds, 22-year-old bride of the backer of the play, informed producer Johnny Walker she had decided she was meant for the leading role.

She said she didn't care at all for the small role Walker had offered her; that she had made up her mind to be a leading lady and that was that.

Producer Walker told the impetuous young daughter of Col. nad Mrs. Granville Fortescue, of Washington, D. C., that she could appear in a minor role or not appear at all; that she would not be a leading lady and that was that.

Hastily summoned as arbiter was Julian Louis Reynolds, one of the younger members of the wealthy tobacco family, who gained invaluable experience for his role by placating an irate butcher who charged Mrs. Reynolds had driven off with his truck last August.

The butcher refused to understand—even as Walker refuses to understand—that the whims of a poor little rich girl should be humored until Reynolds' attorneys soothed his injured feelings with a cash settlement.

Mrs. Reynolds climbed unceremoniously into the front seat of the butcher's truck when she left a tavern party on Long Island's fashionable north shore and drove merrily home. Her chauffeur returned the truck.

Mrs. Reynolds embarked on her stage career soon after returning from Hawaii, where her sister, Mrs. Thalia Fortescue Massie, figured in an assault case. She was given a minor role in the film, "Crime Without Passion."

Her marriage to Reynolds took place in Washington at the home of Mrs. Charles J. Bell last July. Mrs. Reynolds made her debut in Washington in December, 1932, at a brilliant party at the Chevy Chase Club.

Husband Says Wife's Visitors Never Departed

That a front door is not the only means of exit was the argument of defense counsel yesterday when H. R. Howenstein, suing his wife for divorce, testified in District Court that numerous men who called at her apartment did not leave while he watched in the lobby.

Testifying before Chief Justice A. A. Wheat, Howenstein said he and Leonard C. Darling, detective, had on 109 occasions seen Mrs. Howenstein, accompanied by a man, enter the Dahlia apartment house at 7019 Georgia avenue. He said further that on each of these instances he and Darling posted themselves in the lobby of the Dahlia and waited until dawn, or at least until 5 a. m., and had never seen those visitors leave.

When Darling took the stand and corroborated Howenstein's statements, Jean M. Boardman and Cyril Lawrence, attorneys for the defense got busy. Boardman objected particularly to the statement that a man could not leave the apartment house without being seen by Howenstein and Darling, stationed at the posts they specified in the lobby.

Finally, Boardman requested permission to negotiate an egress at the Dahlia that no one standing in the lobby could possibly observe. Attorneys Denny Hughes volunteered to be "exhibit A" in the demonstration to leave Mrs. Howenstein's apartment and get out of the building without being seen by anyone waiting "on watch" in the lobby.

So-court adjourned and all interested persons headed out Georgia avenue. The show was worth the trip, even though the demonstration didn't come off. When Detective Darling discovered that the whole thing was to be done by the back door, and that you can't stand, or sit, in the lobby and keep an eye on the back entrance at the same time, he refused to go through with the demonstration.

Enjoy Your Thanksgivings 1940-1950

Statistics give you 25 to 30 more Thanksgivings than if you had been born a "Pilgrim Father" or a Revolutionary hero... Plan now to enjoy them all, and the precious years between. Exercise sensibly, watch what you eat, be moderate... And, if you drink, choose a whiskey that AGREES with you.

You want fine-tasting whiskey. But wait! Not even a professional "taster" can tell the degree of whiskey-kindness from the taste alone. To provide men with a reliable guide to genuine whiskey-kindness, the House of Seagram went clear to the bottom of the question, "How does the human system respond to different forms of whiskey?"

Months of research by a group of trained, impartial men brought the answer: Seagram's Crown Whiskies, used in moderation, are kind, considerate whiskies, and most likely to agree with the average man.

Seagram's Crowns have all the rich, mellow taste of the finest whiskies. Now, because so skillfully blended, they are thousands of men's choice as A MOST WHOLESOME FORM OF WHISKY, besides! Choose them at the bar for your present pleasure without future penalty. Serve them to your guests at home with assurance of their complete acceptability.

Edith Maxwell Plea for Change In Venue Denied

Court Rules Second Trial
Will Be Held at Wise

devits from citizens of Wise and also by calling seven citizens.

These witnesses agreed that, in view of the prejudice in the county, it would be impossible to find an impartial jury in Wise County. Wherever they went they said, they found people either "for" or "against" Edith. Nowhere, they said, had they found anybody with an open mind.

They told the court that articles which had appeared in some of the metropolitan newspapers had aroused deep resentment in Wise County. The articles had referred to the people of Wise as "hillbillies."

The defense also called J. Preston Adams, former sheriff of Wise County, who told of a demonstration against Edith on the day her father was buried.

State Witnesses Called.

Commonwealth's Attorney Fred Greear, who prosecuted Edith the last time and will prosecute her again December 9, called 15 witnesses, all of whom insisted that Edith could get a fair trial in Wise.

Some testified that most of the persons they had talked to were either for or against the young woman.

In each instance, Greear asked the witnesses if they had heard of any threats to "hang" Edith Maxwell.

None of the witnesses had heard of such threats.

Judge Carter, after seven hours of testimony and arguments, delivered his opinion, saying: "the question of venue is not altogether jurisdictional. The law prescribes where a crime shall be tried. We started out with the theory that a crime shall be tried in the community where it was committed."

"Now in this case the burden is upon the defendant. She must show cause, or, at least a prima facie case."

"Has the defendant borne the burden or shown a prima facie case?"

"The most serious evidence was that presented by Sheriff Adams. He told of the inflammatory statements made by the brother and sister of the deceased."

"I think that episode can be passed by without any further consideration."

The judge said he didn't think the demonstration was "much out of line," considering that two of the demonstrators were relatives of Edith Maxwell.

Doesn't 'Fear Jury.'

Referring to the contention of defense attorneys that there was considerable interest and excitement in the Maxwell case, Judge Carter said:

"It's been my experience that we have very few juries in Virginia that we have to fear. I don't say that juries don't commit errors, nor do I say that courts don't commit errors. There will always be errors as long as cases are decided through human instrumentalities."

"All we can do is to remove errors to a minimum."

"But has the defense shown hostility, prejudice and bias which would render a fair and impartial trial impossible? Does the record show this state of facts?"

"There has been something said about the press. Whether they acted discreetly or not is a matter of opinion. But my own private opinion is that any exaggeration of the case has had little effect on the people of Wise County."

"The duty of the court, it seems to me, is clear: to overrule the motion for a change of venue."

Edith Maxwell, sitting in the midst of her attorneys, quivered and gulped. The attorneys noted an exception, as was to be expected. If, after the second trial things have gone against them, they will cite this exception as an excuse for another trial, to be held elsewhere.

Mrs. John Dolph yesterday contributed $10 to the Edith Maxwell Defense Fund of the Washington Post. This brings the total to $514.78.

order will await outcome of their conference.

The intricacies of a pin ball machine were studied at the hearing. It was shown by the testimony of experts of the Bureau of Standards that there were some 720 variables entering into the "shots of the average player." They insisted that such players could achieve a remarkable score by constant practice and could become experts.

The experts said their tests demonstrated a player of "amateur" standing, while blindfolded, could approximate the score of an expert shooting with his eyes open, thus supporting the contention of the Government that the element of luck surpassed the element of skill and made the machines gaming devices.

Social Justice Called Church's True Business

Dr. Jones Assails Mystical Religion in Preaching Mission Sermon.

Jesus loved people. Jesus loved the whole man. We must do away with the duality between the sacred and the secular.

"A preacher is no more sacred than a shoemaker. A preacher's vestments and prayers do not sanctify him.

"I am reminded of what a Hindu said to me in India.

"This Hindu said: 'If the missionaries had thought less about my soul and more about me, I might have become a Christian.'

"The poor do not want the church's charity. They want justice. Put justice in our social order and sorrow and poverty will disappear. We must not indulge in make-believe, there must be no amearing over with high-down dogmas."

Dr. Jones was the principal speaker of the two-day meeting of the National Preaching Mission. He spoke after a luncheon at the Mayflower.

The purpose of the "mission" is to carry renewed vigor to churches all over America, to arouse them to the needs of the hour, an hour which many churchmen felt was slipping by unheeded by their kind.

The mission, literally a flying course in religion, since September 13, has toured 24 cities by air, holding revivals all over the land. The Washington Federation of Churches sponsored the two-day revival here, which has been heavily attended by clergy and laity.

Washingtonians responded to the "emergency" call of the mission, one of the greatest throngs in recent local church history.

Talked to Workingmen.

Relating how he had talked to workingmen in various cities, Jones said:

"They jumped on me pretty hard. They asked me some very embarrassing questions about the church. But after I had explained what my concept of the function of a church was, they agreed with me. Over and over I heard poor men say, 'We want justice, not religion.'

"And right there is the answer. Justice and religion are not different. For the heart of Christ's religion was 'Do unto others as ye would be done by.' That is the type of religion we should teach.

"Christ taught the Kingdom of God on earth, but His thoughts have been ignored more and more."

Continuing on the relationship of politics to religion, he said:

"Racial snobberies are being built everywhere on the globe, built in pools of blood. Persecution of minorities on theories of superiorities and inferiorities are the rule of the day.

"A word to the Nordic here: The Romans described us as the stupidest, ugliest race in Europe. But we grew, and underdeveloped races of today will grow also, and come to equal us. I fear for the whole of mankind when he begins to build walls around himself."

Preachers and laymen, catching the ardor of Mr. Jones, called out "amens" throughout his address, and when he finished bowed their heads in prayer.

In his prayer, he said:

"Help us forget our labels. May we make complete surrender of our lives to bringing the Kingdom of God on earth. O God, give us a fresh start, set our hearts on fire with an emotion so deep we can't hold it. We have something the world desperately needs. In Jesus' name we ask it."

Van Sweringen, Rail Magnate, Dies on Train

his death was caused by "general exhaustion brought on by mental and emotional strain."

"O. P." who was with him when he died, was deeply affected. The two had been inseparable since the days near the turn of the century when they struck out from their home near Wooster, Ohio, and came to Cleveland to sell newspapers, run office errands and, finally, to build a railroad empire whose ramifications few Clevelanders could accurately appraise.

Began in Real Estate.

The brother team of Oris Paxton Van Sweringen and Mantis James Van Sweringen started selling real estate in Cleveland and in a little more than two decades became controllers of $3,000,000 worth of American railroads.

Owners of a newspaper route in their teens, large scale real estate operators in their twenties, railroad magnates in their thirties—these were milestones in their rapidly sensational rise. Throughout their working lives they lived together in a relationship extraordinarily close even for brothers. Neither ever married.

Their railroad domain, through holding companies, extended over more than 21,000 miles. It reached from the eastern seaboard to El Paso and Pueblo, Colo. It included the Missouri Pacific, the Chesapeake & Ohio, Nickel Plate, Erie, Pere Marquette and Hocking Valley Railroads.

Oris, born near Wooster, Ohio, April 24, 1879, was only 37 years old and Mantis was but 35 when the brothers acquired their first railroad—the Nickel Plate—in 1916.

Within six years they were astonishing the railroad world with far-reaching consolidations.

The brothers got into railroading only incidentally. They were engaged in building up Shaker Heights, exclusive Cleveland suburb, when they learned that the Nickel Plate, then a losing line, was for sale at a bargain price. They were looking for a right of way for a rapid transit line from downtown Cleveland to Shaker Heights.

Enlisting the support of Cleveland bankers, they obtained control of the Nickel Plate, then dubbed "313 miles of rust," for $2,000,000 cash and the balance in ten annual payments of $500,000 each. They quickly bought three more roads—the Toledo, St. Louis & Western (Cleveland), Lake Erie & Western, and the Detroit & Toledo Shore Line—which they consolidated with the Nickel Plate, with John J. Bernet at the head of the system.

Became Prosperous Head.

The Nickel Plate became a prosperous railroad, and with it as a nucleus, the Van Sweringens acquired control of one railroad after another. Acquisition of the Missouri Pacific in 1930 and dedication of their new $200,000,000 terminal development in Cleveland the same year brought them to new heights.

In contrast to their dramatic careers, the brothers themselves were quiet, unostentatious and slow-speaking. They shunned the public spotlight.

While the Van Sweringen brothers primarily were known as railroad men, it was their successful real estate development that started them to wealth.

Oris became an office boy at 15 for the Bradley Chemical Co., and Mantis followed in his footsteps two years later. Soon both were clerks, but already they were looking toward real estate.

They were not discouraged when their first venture failed. They heard of a syndicate owning a large tract of land near Cleveland and decided to make it a suburban development.

They borrowed money and optioned 2,000 acres. That was the beginning of Shaker Heights and was their first big transaction—when Oris was 26.

The young brothers then bolstered their finances by selling "whole-sale" a large part of their realty holdings to prominent Clevelanders, meanwhile taking options on adjoining acreage. Next they built a rapid transit line to make Shaker Heights easily accessible.

Home-building in the new suburb became rapid and the land which was appraised at $240,000 in 1930 attained a value in succeeding years of more than $300,000,000.

By that time they also had acquired control of their far-flung railroad empire, and then, for the first time in their lives, they found it necessary to depart slightly from their close association.

Although continuing to work together for common purposes, they wished to avoid interlocking management of their Eastern and Western systems, so while Mantis continued as an executive in the Eastern group of roads, Oris resigned from them and was elected chairman of the board of the Missouri Pacific.

Both Were Retiring.

Serene and urbane, the brothers were as retiring in private life as they were spectacular in the business world. The day their Cleveland terminal was dedicated they stayed at home to avoid the crowds.

That home was in the Shaker Heights section, the development that proved to be their El Dorado. A 15-acre estate and a stock farm were there and Mantis liked to ride some of their blooded steeds.

But Oris went to the farm seemingly only for quiet relaxation. It was said too, that Oris never would ride in a boat.

Living with the bachelor brothers were their two spinster sisters, Carrie and Edith. There was also another brother, Herbert. The mother of this family died when Oris was 6 years old. The father, James Tower Van Sweringen, had been an engineer in the Pennsylvania oil fields after serving in the Union army during the Civil War.

The bachelor brothers were far removed from the desk-pounding executive popularly associated with "big business."

Shyness and simplicity were their characteristics. Intimates claimed they had an aversion to publicity so intense as to approach a psychological complex.

When a newspaper listed them as "eligible bachelors" and published the personal side of their lives, one of the brothers was reported to have become ill from emotional stress.

Blushed at Congratulations.

O. P. blushed in New York last year as friends showered him with congratulations on the success of a financial coup through which the brothers regained control of their rail properties at a house of Morgan auction.

Upon the completion of their $3-sentence. Denying existence of any evidence that he had "advocated violence," Herndon told the Supreme Court his right of free speech, free press and free assembly had been violated.

The high tribunal yesterday declined to review an appeal by Illinois State officials to enter the names of Communist Presidential and Vice Presidential candidates on the ballot. The appeal came too late for the justices under normal procedure to rule before the November elections.

With Stone ill, repetition of yesterday's unusual division of the court may be repeated in future New Deal decisions, becoming as familiar as the 5-to-4 decisions of recent years. For all legal purposes, such rule is as binding as if the decision were unanimous. Court attaches could remember only two recent similar divisions. In 1933 and 1934, two 4-to-4 rulings were made, when Chief Justice Hughes was disqualified as a Duke estate tax case and when Justice Roberts did not participate in a Pennsylvania railroad case.

Yeast Price Fixing Charged to 2 Firms

The Federal Trade Commission yesterday charged Standard Brands, Inc., of New York, and Anheuser-Busch, Inc., of St. Louis, with violation of the Robinson-Patman act through price discrimination in the sale of bakers' yeast.

The commission said the respondents had violated, identically, section 2 (A) which provides "that it shall be unlawful for any person engaging in commerce . . . to discriminate in price between different purchasers of commodities of like grade or quality . . . where the effect of such discrimination may be substantially to lessen competition . . ."

When a newspaper listed them as "eligible bachelors" and published the personal side of their lives, one of the brothers was reported to have become ill from emotional stress.

The court's affirmation of the New York law was well received in official Washington. Senator O'Mahoney (Democrat), Wyoming, said the famous "Mr. Dooley" remark that the Supreme Court generally follows election returns, "seems to be right." Professing no surprise, Chairman Ashurst, of the Senate Judiciary Committee, said leading attorneys believed the law valid.

Vacationing in Los Angeles, Gov. Herbert Lehman of New York, said he was "delighted" to hear that the law passed in 1935 on his recommendation was ruled valid, according to Associated Press.

It's our family's whiskey, neighbor—and neighbor, it's your price!

Here's us Wilkens buying our Thanksgiving turkey over at Farmer Smollett's place

That's Farmer Smollett bent down there and showing us how his turkeys will eat right out of his hand. Farmer Smollett was remarking to us how you just can't expect a turkey to go and get itself all plumped full of juicy tender meat without you fattening him up real good on first rate grain. Pa Wilken always said the same about whiskey. You got to use the finest, cleanest grain, if you want your whiskey to have a grand taste and body to it. On the left of Farmer Smollett, it's Tom and me. And on the right, it's William and a party everybody around here calls Cap. Look at our dog Jessie there. If she had her way, I don't guess we'd have that turkey on Thanksgiving Day!

Harry E. Wilken

For special tastiness on Thanksgiving—
—enjoy the personal whiskey recipe of a family of distillers!

Pa Wilken always declared how Thanksgiving—being the day of tasty home recipes—was one day when you've just got to feast on a fat juicy turkey and The Wilken Family's own personal whiskey recipe. This Family's Whiskey Recipe of ours, on account of its extra tastiness and extra mildness, fits into Thanksgiving eating and drinking like nothing else.

You see the Wilken Family Whiskey is really something pretty special. I don't imagine there's anything like it anywhere around. For it happens we've been a family of whiskey making folks ever since anybody can remember. Thinking back, I still mind the time when I used to watch my old Grandpa Wilken busy himself over one of those old-fashioned looking stills they used to have those days. And as for Pa Wilken—his personal experience comes to something more than 40 whole years. So you can easily see there's plenty of reason for The Wilken Family's own family recipe being just about the tastiest whiskey you ever yet come across.

And in regards to Thanksgiving—I'd just like to tell you before I forget. We've had folks tell us time and again how real easy this Family's Recipe of ours rests on their stomach. I just thought this was something you'd appreciate knowing—considering the hearty eating that goes on most usually on Thanksgiving Day.

G-Men on Trail Of Bandit Gang Active in D. C.

Federal Agents Roused by Series of Robberies; Head of Gang Identified.

Physician Held Up.
The Federal agents traced the bandits south to the North Carolina border, where they held up a physician, abandoned their stolen car and picked up another car with Tennessee tags.

Driving at top speed the bandits next appeared at Trenton, N. J., Saturday night, where they abandoned the second stolen car.

Holt and Riggins, it was learned, corroborated Private Ayers' identification of the picture of the slain gangster's "kid brother" as the leader of the bandit gang.

Private Ayers was patrolling a post near the laundry of the fort, where a quantity of highly inflammable materials are stored.

"They stopped their car and shouted something and when I walked over two of them pushed guns against me," Ayers said. "After disarming me they threw me into the humble seat and locked me in. Then they drove until they reached the spot where they let me out. One of them, armed with a blackjack and a gun, wanted to go to work on me in the woods, but the fellow in riding boots pushed him away."

Fort Myer officials were gravely concerned over the abduction.

"Suppose someone had locked the sentry in a car and set fire to the laundry," said one officer. "The whole regiment would have had to turn out to fight such a blaze and there's no telling what other sabotage could be committed in other parts of the reservation."

Brown Issues Warning.

Maj. Ernest W. Brown, superintendent of police, yesterday warned motorists against parking their cars in secluded sections after dark until the gang is captured.

Following the robbery of the two couples on the Mount Vernon boulevard it was revealed that no policemen patrol the highway after midnight, that in the 430 square miles of Fairfax County only two policemen are on duty until 2 a. m., and that after that hour no officers are on patrol duty.

Lesson in Logic

Dims Howard U.

Threat of Strike

Threats of a student strike at Howard University to support demands of the football team for more abundant gifts began to fade last night after President Moreshead Johnson administered a lesson in logic to the strike committee.

Dr. Johnson, the student committee admitted, convinced them it would be impossible under present conditions for the university to award work scholarships to a majority of the football players, because if it did so the team would not be recognized by the Colored Intercollegiate Athletic Association and the Middle States Association.

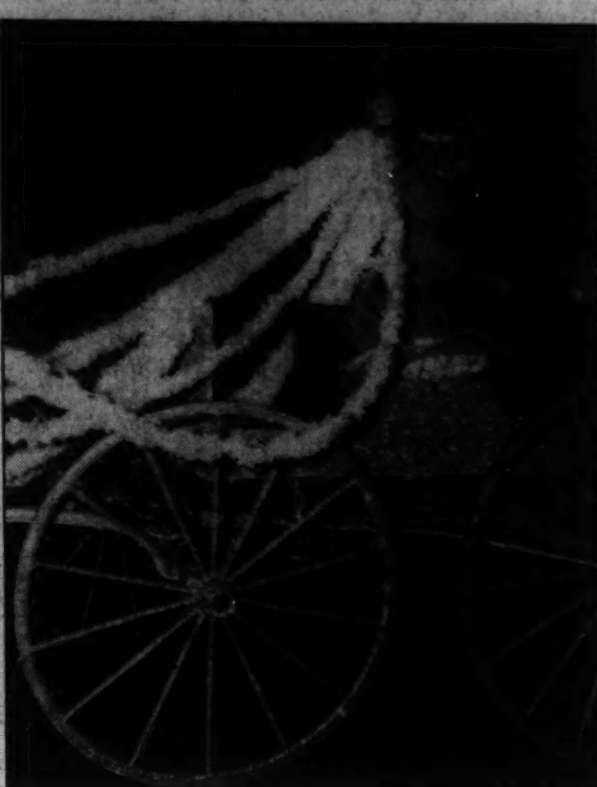

So today the strike committee will confer with the football team on the advisability of revising their demands for presentation to the university trustees in the spring.

Special Session Pleas

Richmond, Va., Nov. 23 (AP).—Renewal of the State-wide drive for a special session of the General Assembly and announcement that a special appeal would be made tomorrow to Gov. Perry to issue the call at once were immediate results of the United States Supreme Court decision upholding the constitutionality of the New York unemployment insurance act.

A Preview of Santa Claus

Christmas Parade Is Staged

Before 30,000 in Northeast

Business Men's Association Opens Its 'Santa Claus Lane' on H Street With Largest March in History of Group.

A preview of Santa Claus—led and all—was staged for 30,000 persons, mostly children, in the Northeast section last night as the Northeast Business Men's Association opened its "Santa Claus Lane" on H street with the largest parade in its history.

Headed by Maj. Ernest W. Brown, chief of police, and viewed by Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen, the column including three Santa Clauses, five bands, stunts and commercial floats, required more than an hour to pass.

Purpose of the parade was to open Santa Claus Lane and to honor the Ninth Precinct. Mansfield, at completion of the opening ceremonies, was presented a scroll of goodwill from the business men by Commissioner Hazen.

The Santa Clauses were the hit of the parade. Children threatened to cause a small stampede into the column when a Santa, perched atop of a decorated truck, threw candy to them.

Most popular of all the Santas was one entered by the Sherwood School. He was pulled in a real Santa in an old coat.

The largest crowd in Northeast history to watch a parade on H street stood eight deep from Third to Eleventh street.

Prizes for the best entries went to the Gunther Brewing Co. best commercial float, Knights of Columbus, best band, and Job's Daughters, best drilled unit.

Illegal Operation

Suspects Named

Herbert Corlis Bowen, 46, of the 1400 block of Park road, and Frank Milton Rowley, 30, of the 3600 block of Warder street, last night were charged with abduction by Detective Sgt. A. D. Mansfield and Precinct Detective R. F. McCarty.

Evidence against the pair, alleged to have been connected with an illegal operation "hospital," was collected by the detectives, who also were working on the cases of three other persons seized Saturday.

At the Detective Bureau it was said nearly 20 women have been patients in rooms at the Park road address, which was raided Saturday.

10 Rebel Unions Are Suspended In A. F. L. Vote

Indefinite Ouster Ordered After Bitter Fight; Lewis Silent.

tion was assailed sharply by C. I. O. floor leaders, including J. C. Lewis, head of the Iowa Federation of Labor, who toiled 27 years in mine pits. He and A. A. Myrup, of the Bakery and Confectionery Workers, refused to sign the resolutions committee report.

The Iowa bluntly accused the council of using "submarine methods" and of "economic treason." In "sabotaging more than 1,000,000 workers from the American Federation of Labor."

The battle of the floor raged from the time Woll completed reading the report and acknowledged a three-minute ovation, to the time the vote was cast. In addition to Iowan Lewis, Frank X. Martell, delegate of the typographers, assailed the council for depriving the C. I. O. unions of convention seats.

"This is a quarrel that rises out of personalities and we are the ones that will suffer in a split," he warned.

Craft unionists struck back with smashing blows. Frey accused the C. I. O. unionists of "insincerity" and charged they had used force to switch craft unions into the "rebel" camp.

"They used force and they threatened and coerced to achieve their aims," he roared.

John Cosfield, president of the plumbers, said the report should have been "more aggressive." Robert B. Henseth, of the Hotel and Restaurant Employees' Union, accused Lewis of using autocratic methods and warned the federation to "hang together, or we'll hang separately."

Note Eliminated.

Earlier in the day, federation leaders eliminated from the report a section cautioning Jewish unionists that they had been given a welcoming hand by the federation when shunned by others. Max Zaritsky, a Russian Jew who heads the United Hat, Cap and Millinery Workers, accused the committee of deliberately raising the "Jewish question" in the C. I. O. struggle.

W. R. Trotter, typographical delegate, said he heard the "voice of Hitler" in the resolution.

The section finally was withdrawn upon motion of Frey, secretary of the resolutions committee.

Convention Assails Traffic Regulations

St. Louis, Nov. 23 (AP).—The traffic committee of the Mississippi Valley Association asserted in a resolution made public at the association's convention tonight that "the regulatory burdens now imposed upon rail, highway and water commerce should be lightened rather than increased."

Senator Royal S. Copeland, of New York, chairman of the Senate's Commerce Committee, told delegates that no public money should be spent for waterways development "if there is a reasonable prospect private enterprise will find the money and will make the desirable investment," and Senator Bennett Champ Clark, of Missouri, said the Interstate Commerce Commission, through its rate-making functions, "has been steadily attempting to thwart" Congressional efforts to re-establish commerce on inland waterways.

Woll later denied any intention of "raising the Jewish question."

President Green, in a summation of the case against the C. I. O. unions, told of repeated efforts to arrange peace conferences and of the attitude of the "rebels."

"My God!" cried Green, "what must men do?"

Given 30-Day Notice.

The council, he said, gave the C. I. O. 30 days to drop their activities after "we had begged our knees for discussions and conferences."

"They made their choice," he roared. "Why weren't they good sports if they wanted to be represented? Why didn't they say 'we know we're right, but we'll bow and fight it out at Tampa'?"

"But they didn't say that. Not some of them quit paying dues. You pay your dues. That's why you are here. He recalled peace offers submitted by the United Hatters, Cap and Millinery Workers. He said the C. I. O. refused to appoint a committee to meet with the A. F. of L.

"If members of our peace committee are unsatisfactory to the C. I. O., we'll name men who are satisfactory," he shouted.

"How much humiliation must you suffer?"

"No C. I. O. organized the automobile industry—the A. F. of L. spent $200,000 to do it," Green said. "Their ingratitude was base."

"My friends, there is nothing. There is no sacrifice I will not face to prevent a split in the American Federation of Labor."

Green's voice broke as he uttered what was almost a prayer for unity and defended his own course in the controversy.

Early, J. C. Lewis ridiculed the charge that C. I. O. unions are communistic.

"The American Liberty League and Ham Fish (Representative Hamilton Fish, Republican, of New York) protect us from the Reds and it comes with poor grace for the American Federation of Labor to steal their thunder."

Jonathan Eddy, of the American Newspaper Guild, defended the C. I. O. and assailed "summary action" in the labor crisis.

Jerome Davis, president of the Federation of Teachers, announced his union's opposition to the suspension of the C. I. O. unions.

"Every reactionary employer in the Nation will chuckle," Davis said, "if we go through with this suspension order tonight."

C.W. DeKnight, Attorney, Dies In Hospital Here

Pneumonia Fatal to Lawyer, 69, Prominent in City Social Circles.

Clarence Woods DeKnight, prominent attorney and figure in the social world, died Sunday night in Garfield Memorial Hospital after an attack of pneumonia. Mr. DeKnight, who was 69, had been ill six days.

A native of Rocky Mount, Va., Mr. DeKnight represented many large firms and corporations before the executive departments, the Court of Claims, the U. S. Supreme Court and the International Claims Commission.

At one time he was secretary to the late Senator Arthur Poe Gorman of Maryland, and years ago had served as secretary to the Senate Committee on Naval Affairs. He once was secretary of the United States Army Factory Board, appointed to investigate the price of armor plating. Later he held a similar position with the Puerto Rican Evacuation Commission.

Mr. DeKnight was a member of the American Society of International Law, American Law Institute, American Bar Association, Navy League of the United States, U. S. Chamber of Commerce, American Chamber of Commerce in France, International Chamber of Commerce and the National Aeronautic Association.

He served as a delegate to the third congress of the International Chamber of Commerce in Brussels in 1925, the fourth congress in Stockholm in 1927, the fifth congress in Amsterdam in 1929 and the sixth congress in Washington in 1931.

Mr. DeKnight was a member of the national council of the National Economy League and the national advisory council of the American Peace Society. He belonged to Phi Kappa Psi and Phi Delta Phi fraternities, the George Washington University Alumni Association, the Aero Club of the Washington Golf and Country Club and the Riding and Hunt Club. He was a thirty-third degree Mason.

A familiar figure in society, DeKnight was widely known in Washington, New York and Newport. He was an inveterate traveler and had been around the world several times. Once a year he went abroad and usually he spent much of his time along the French Riviera.

Funeral services for Mr. DeKnight, who was a bachelor, will be held at the Hines undertaking establishment tomorrow at 3 p. m. Burial will be in Rock Creek Cemetery.

Washington and Lee Alumni Meet Tonight

The Washington and Lee Alumni Association of the District will hold its annual fall smoker tonight at 8 o'clock at the Racquet Club. Plans for the game between Washington and Lee and Maryland on Thanksgiving Day will be discussed.

Raymond T. Johnson, professor of law, and Earl S. Mattingly, registrar of the university, will speak.

Werber Is Cited as Disorderly; Bondsman Sued By D. C. Driver For Auto 'Fine'

Baseball Player Pays Speed Fine and Protests 'Reckless' Charge.

Bill Werber, 28-year-old major league baseball player, who lives in College Heights, Md., was charged with disorderly conduct at the Hyattsville police station yesterday after he and Sgt. Ralph Brown, of the county police, had engaged in a heated argument over a speeding conviction in court.

Werber had come to the Hyattsville police court to answer a charge of exceeding 25 miles an hour through Riverdale, Md., and of reckless driving. He was arrested November 14 by Sgt. Brown.

The former Tech High and Duke University star athlete, who now plays third base for the Boston Red Sox, waited several hours for his case to be called.

He pleaded "guilty" to exceeding 25 miles an hour but denied he was driving his car recklessly.

Judge George B. Merrick ruled that the reckless driving warrant had been drawn improperly and dismissed that charge. On the speed offense, however, the judge fined the ball player $10 and costs.

After paying the fine, the big league ball player, singled out Brown for a verbal lacing. "I wish you would come up and pay me a visit sometime without your uniform," he said.

"I thought you could take it," the sergeant replied.

"I can take it," Werber replied with expletives, "but I don't think you can."

"That's disorderly conduct," Brown snapped back and proceeded to make out a warrant.

Federal Agents Investigate Prince Georges Political Leaders' Incomes.

Another Washington motorist yesterday filed suit to recover money he claims to have paid to Elmer Humphrey, bondsman, of Suitland, Md., for traffic violation fines and costs, which were never turned over to the police court.

At the same time it was revealed that agents of the Internal Revenue Bureau in the last several months have questioned Prince Georges County lawyers and political leaders, including persons who have been implicated in the investigation of the alleged bonding racket, seeking to discover who is benefiting from "protection" money.

It was pointed out that money received from the State, county or municipal treasuries cannot be taxed by the Federal Government, but that other income is subject to the tax.

In a suit filed in Upper Marlboro late yesterday, Stanley A. Fox, 2507

Sherman avenue northwest, alleges that Humphrey owes him $156.70. Fox has stated in an affidavit submitted to the Keystone Automobile Club, instigators of the investigation, that he was arrested June 15 by two Prince Georges County policemen near Hyattsville, Md.

He was taken before Judge Herbert J. Moffat, Fox avers, and ordered held under $1,000 bond on a charge of exceeding 60 miles an hour.

Later, Fox declares he paid $35 to Humphrey for a bond fee and was told to see the bondsman before trial.

The night before the case was to come up in court, Fox says he went to Humphrey's house and paid him $101.70 for which he obtained a receipt.

The case, it is alleged, never went to court and no money was paid to the court for either fine or costs.

A similar suit was filed against Humphrey by another Washington motorist a month ago.

The County Commissioners will meet at Upper Marlboro, Md., today. They have declined to say whether or not they will hear additional evidence against other members of the police force.

Last week they refused flatly to allow Harvey Cobb, counsel for the Keystone Automobile Club, to come before them with charges against the police.

Their action was left unexplained. Previously they had suspended three members of the Hyattsville Police Department pending the Grand Jury's investigation of the alleged bonding racket.

The investigation of the purported graft ring, which is supposed to have relieved Washington motorists of nearly $2,000 a week, began October 20 when representatives of the Keystone Automobile Club appeared at the regular session of the Grand Jury and presented sworn affidavits implicating members of the police department, justices of the peace and bondsmen.

The jury was sufficiently impressed to recommend that it be recalled in special session to continue its investigation. The jury is expected to reconvene about December 1.

Red Flannels Still 'Blossom Unseen,' Textile Chief Says

The government let it be known yesterday that a suit of red underwear lies beneath many a modern American exterior.

"You'd be surprised," said E. T. Pickard, chief of the textile division of the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce, "but lots of people still wear them."

Central heating became a fixture almost everywhere," Pickard explained, "and the average citizen ceased to dodge perpetually the frigid drafts that previously invaded his home and working place every winter."

With abundant warmth something had to come off and heavy underwear seemed the most natural garment to discard.

Rescue Unit Revives Victim of Gas Fumes

Mrs. Grace Potter, 25, narrowly escaped death yesterday from coal gas seeping into her apartment at 1020 Otis street northeast from a defective furnace flue.

How to Ease a Cold Quickly

Get Quick-Acting, Quick-Dissolving Bayer Aspirin. Take 2 Tablets

The modern way to ease a cold is this: Two Bayer Aspirin tablets the moment you feel a cold coming on. Then repeat, if necessary, according to instructions in the box.

At the same time, if you have a sore throat, crush and dissolve three BAYER tablets in one-third glass of water. And gargle with this mixture twice.

The Bayer Aspirin you take internally will act to combat the fever and pains which usually accompany colds. The gargle will provide almost instant relief from rawness and pain, acting like a local anesthetic on the irritated membrane of your throat.

Try this way. Your doctor, we know, will endorse it. For it is a quick, effective means of combating a cold. Ask for Bayer Aspirin by the full name at your druggist's—not for "aspirin" alone.

Beauty From Steel.

If America's art is her architecture, the Nation has lost one of its foremost artists in the death of Ernest R. Graham. During a busy lifetime, he designed many of the country's most noteworthy buildings.

The list of his creations reads almost like a key to a panorama of the New York and Chicago skylines. Not that his genius was confined entirely to these two cities: Philadelphia, Cleveland, Boston and even London boast structures conceived on his drawing board. The Capital, too, knows his work, for he planned both the General Postoffice and Union Station here. By unhappy coincidence, Lorado Taft, who designed the Columbus Fountain in the plaza before the station, also died only a few weeks ago. The two men had previously worked side by side on another project. Mr. Graham was assistant director of works for the Columbian Exposition in 1893, where Taft executed several of the principal statues and fountains.

Besides his eye for design and his intense industry—or in conjunction with these characteristics—Mr. Graham was noted for his forward-looking vision. Perhaps more than any other he was responsible for the pleasing development of Chicago's lake front. The fire of 1871 stirred his first dreams of a new city of towers. The World's Fair assignment gave him pioneer experience in steel construction and with this he was able to begin to bring his vision to fulfillment.

How well he succeeded is attested not only by the calls for his talents which went up throughout the country, but also by the number of fellow architects who adopted or adapted his techniques. The $700,000,000 worth of buildings in which he had a vital part will stand as his fitting memorial.

More Than Votes At Stake.

After a conference with Gov. Landon, Gifford Pinchot announces that the Republican Party must rid itself of the domination of "concentrated wealth," and put itself "in tune with the dominant sentiment of the American people" if it wishes to "come back."

Unquestionably the G. O. P. to be effective must rid itself of even the appearance of being ruled by special groups for selfish purposes. And a liberal, intelligent leadership is needed to dissipate the suspicions voiced by the former Governor of Pennsylvania. However, it is well to keep in mind that there is no real advance in jumping from frying pan to fire, and that the integrity and usefulness of a political party can be endangered by many forms of domination other than those of organized wealth.

Republican politicians who view their party merely as a vote-getting machine are no doubt concluding that the methods which brought such an overwhelming victory for the Democrats are worthy of emulation. It will be natural for them to assume that the road to future Republican triumphs must begin with a penitent confession of past errors. Such penitence is in order, but it need not involve the mistake of outlining a plan of campaign prematurely. Instead of keeping an open mind and waiting to see what specific issues are going to develop.

At present it is impossible to foresee when or in what form effective opposition to the Administration will arise. If the President justifies the confidence in his leadership shown by a great majority of the American electorate, there will be little for an opposition party to do in the near future. But if he makes serious mistakes, or disappoints the sanguine expectations of some of his supporters, the opposition will be all the more potent if it has previously avoided hasty commitments.

Whether the opposition retains the label of the Republican Party or carries on under another name is immaterial from the long-range viewpoint. But it is extremely important that there should be an effective opposition of some sort, ready to spring into action in response to popular demand. In the past new parties have arisen in emergencies and existing ones have vanished or been metamorphosed. In the last election, indeed, we witnessed some extraordinary reversals of position on the part of the two major parties, notably in their attitude toward the preservation of States' rights. They may change their positions equally easily in the future.

There is work and plenty of it for an opposition party, even though the line of demarcation in matters of principle may be vague. The opposition provides a safeguard against dictatorial methods and a challenge to those in power to measure up to their promises of performance. It also focuses constructive criticism upon impractical undertakings of the governing group.

In the last campaign the Republicans made the mistake of indiscriminately attacking Administration policies. Although such wholesale condemnation proved to be very poor political strategy, it does not follow that the election meant repudiation of the function of intelligent criticism, any more than it meant popular endorsement of every aspect of the Roosevelt program.

Outlook For Retrenchment.

Since Chairman Harrison of the Senate Finance Committee is "absolutely" sure there will be no increase in taxes, his hope that budgetary balance will be achieved by 1938 can only be realized by a drastic curtailment of outlays. According to President Roosevelt's revised September estimates, expenditures for the current fiscal year will amount to about $7,763,000,000. And this total will be swollen by additional relief appropriations which Congress will be asked to vote soon after it reassembles.

It is well to keep in mind that only $560,000,000 of the huge outlays to be made during the present fiscal year is accounted for by cash payment of the bonus. Exclusive of bonus payments, indeed, expenditures this year will be considerably above the level of the fiscal year 1935-36. Hence, if the country is to come within sight of a balanced budget in 1938, emergency appropriations will have to be rigorously pruned and expensive new commitments as rigorously avoided.

When analyzed in detail the task is not really as impossible as it seems. For instance, the rapid business improvement, resulting in the re-employment by private industries of large numbers of workers, justifies a gradual discontinuance of work relief—one of the major causes of deficits. Congress will also find it easier to cut appropriations for public works intended primarily to provide jobs for the idle or to prime the business pump. Only a few days ago, in fact, Secretary Ickes told the Conference of Mayors that he had become impatient when "pressed to approve the expenditure of more Federal money in sections that are as prosperous as they ever have been in the past, or even more prosperous."

The rise in farm income has also reduced the pressure to maintain a lavish system of agricultural benefits under the pretext of furthering soil conservation. Then, too, there are abundant opportunities for saving through the reorganization and merging of various emergency bureaus. The Resettlement Administration is an outstanding example of those superfluous New Deal agencies whose heterogeneous activities could be much more economically and efficiently discharged if distributed among established Government departments.

In short, Congress will have an opportunity to effect that "rational" decrease in Federal spending desired by Senator Harrison under extremely favorable conditions. But constructive retrenchment calls not only for reductions in the scale of present outlays but abstention from new forms of costly experimentation. It is especially encouraging, therefore, to be told by Senator Harrison that there is strong opposition in Congress to any further expansion of the emergency set-up. Furthermore, there is no immediate danger of another veterans' raid upon the Treasury, although constant vigilance will always be necessary to prevent lesser raids by organized minorities.

With spending discriminatingly curtailed, much can be accomplished to restore fiscal soundness. But that does not relieve Congress from the obligation to overhaul our tax system. It is greatly in need of reform, not simply for the purpose of increasing revenues, but for the sake of eliminating inequities and introducing a better balance into the tax structure.

Upholding States' Rights.

In the absence of Justice Stone the Supreme Court has by a 4 to 4 decision affirmed the ruling of the New York Court of Appeals upholding the constitutionality of the unemployment insurance act of that State. While this leaves the issue somewhat uncertain in case similar legislation should later be passed upon by a full court, the evenly divided decision is generally accepted as removing any danger that State laws of this type will be invalidated on constitutional grounds.

The ruling in the present case throws little light on the Court's probable attitude toward the Federal social security act, which raises complex questions of the limits of the Federal taxing power. It does, however, strongly indicate that the Court will not take the illogical position of preventing the States from passing social legislation of a type generally regarded as being outside the province of the Federal Government.

As the New York Court of Appeals said in upholding the statute: "It would be a strange sort of government, in fact no government at all, that could not give help in such trouble" (that is, relief from the menace of unemployment). If the Supreme Court of the United States had denied the existence of that "due process" clause, the clear alternative would have been a constitutional amendment.

The fact that the New York unemployment insurance act has been upheld, even in a negative manner, strengthens the hope that the Court will find valid reasons for sustaining the Ohio minimum wage law, and thus remove the necessity for amending the Constitution to provide reasonable protection against exploitation of labor.

It would be an anomalous situation for the States to be permitted to tax employers to support unemployed workers while denying them the right to compel employers to pay practicable subsistence wages to those actually at work.

Russia Hits Back.

In threatening to withdraw the fishing concessions recently granted Japan after negotiations lasting nearly a year, Russia has assailed the newly concluded German-Japanese agreement at one of its most vulnerable points.

From the Russian point of view not the least disturbing aspect of that accord is its vagueness. It is understood that the treaty provides for reciprocal German-Japanese trade concessions, particularly with reference to Manchukuo. The Germans have also admitted that it pledges the two nations to common antagonism against communism. But what the Soviet leaders would particularly like to know is whether the Berlin-Tokyo deal includes an actual military agreement against Russia.

That it does so has been denied both in Berlin and Tokyo, but the Russians are not so sure. At any rate, they have now given a clear warning to Japan that if the island empire chooses to play the game of the Third Reich it can expect no favors from Moscow.

It is a curious fact, certainly, that the reports of a German-Japanese alliance came close on the heels of a development which to many observers foreshadowed a distinct lessening of Russo-Japanese tensions. Not only did Moscow and Tokyo come to terms regarding the troublesome fisheries question, but concessions were also made to Japan by Russia in the oil dispute in Northern Sakhalin. At the same time the way was paved for a settlement of the Manchukuo-Siberian border problem.

It seemed as if the two rivals had at last agreed to bury the hatchet. From the Japanese viewpoint the commercial value of the Russian concessions is considerable. But the Russians have expected that Japan, in return, would agree not to line up with any anti-Soviet power. No doubt it was Russia's fears regarding the possibility of a German attack that was responsible for its unprecedented readiness to make such concessions to the Tokyo regime. Now it is wondering whether those concessions were all in vain.

It is up to Japan to choose between a fisheries agreement with Russia on extremely satisfactory lines or an agreement with Germany which, whatever its political implications may be, is no doubt primarily important, from the Japanese viewpoint, because it may make the Third Reich a partner in the exploitation of Manchukuo's resources.

Possibly the Japanese will be able to convince Moscow that the Japanese-German deal is important chiefly in its commercial aspects, and that the anti-Communist agreement is only a gesture. But in that case Germany, which is moving heaven and earth to create a united front of anti-Communist powers, may grow cool toward its new potential ally of the Far East. The one thing that is clear is that Japan cannot successfully win Russia's friendship while strengthening its ties with the nation which Russia now regards as its most dangerous rival.

Kings And Coiffures.

More politicians may have their own opinions as to the importance of the recent election, but a visiting French "hair stylist" is certain that the coming inauguration of President Roosevelt will be without influence in his field. "The approaching coronation of Edward VIII," says M. Guillaume, "is the reigning factor in all feminine styles."

Patriotism is outraged by such an unnecessary and alien conclusion. Indeed, M. Guillaume's descriptions of coming coiffures indicate how appropriately they could be adapted to domestic politics. There is a definite hint of the Farley influence in what he calls his masterpiece, where the face is framed by "a fluff of curls suggesting plums." Another sure bet is missed when M. Guillaume fails to designate as the "G. O. P." that style in which "a soft wispy bang distinguishes the front."

In balance, however, it must be admitted that current politics has not done much for more abundant coiffures. Barbering is a conservative art, after all, and it would take at least a surrealist to produce a tonorial effect worthy of the designation of "Social Security" or "Reciprocal Trade."

But if we must have monarchist styles in this proletarian age, incongruities will be unavoidable. No surprise should be occasioned when one observes a "Queen Victoria Puff" chewing gum at her typewriter, or a "Madame Pempadour Effect" sliding up to a soda fountain to lunch on a marshmallow sundae.

A psychiatrist says that by 1960 the entire population of the world will be in insane asylums—Press report. From which side of the wall was he speaking?

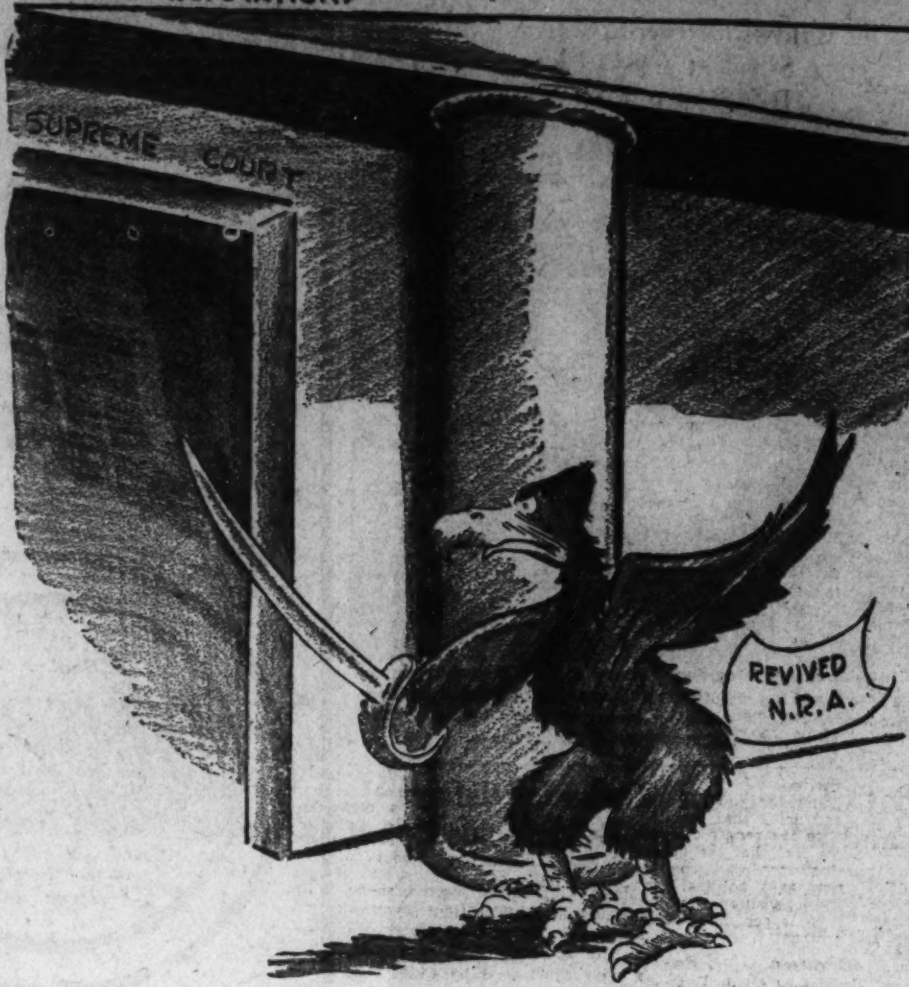

Generally speaking, the ones who are not supporting the New Deal are those who have to support the New Deal.

It is reported that a Florida dentist broke a patient's leg when pulling a tooth. It's an unusual case. The roots of a wisdom tooth rarely extend below the fifth vertebra.

Letters to the Editor

The Theater's Ladder.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Nobody interested in progress would deny the talented neophyte his merited opportunity. Formerly, in theatricals, as in every other line, apprenticeship was provided for in the regular manner. The worthy and ambitious performer crashed the profession in the time-honored manner by becoming a professional in a small way and making good on his opportunities. In my opinion the notion that a scramble of talent is necessary to produce the best available is the veriest poppycock. Are we all not, by the very nature of things in this workaday world, professionals in our respective lines? Is not amateurism in any line in the promotion of amateur nights? Are we all not, by the very nature of things in this workaday world, professionals in our respective lines? Is not amateurism in any line in the promotion of amateur nights? Are we all not, by the very nature of things in this workaday world, professionals in our respective lines? Is not amateurism in any line in the promotion of amateur nights?

In consideration of a situation of this kind there is this angle: The amateur makes good and receives an engagement with a regular studio. This naturally makes him a professional and as such he will henceforth be obliged to compete against amateurs. Thus, he faces an incongruous situation, no matter which way it is figured. And why any particular credit for the promotion of amateurism on the air? The idea certainly is neither novel nor original. Amateur nights were long a feature of houses devoted to the lower branches of theatricals. I refer, of course, to the promotion of amateur nights. Admiration For Spain's Loyalists

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Several points made by William F. Montavon in his letter on the Spanish civil war warrant comment.

He quotes Signor Bernardo Ponce as saying that the forces lined up on one side and the other side are numerically just about equal. This statement appears to conflict with the observations of American correspondents like Walter Duranty and Floyd Gibbons, who have conveyed the impression that a large majority of the population favored the elected Spanish government. Moreover, accepting the thesis that the contending forces are of equal strength, it becomes difficult to explain the large percentage of Moorish and other mercenaries in the Fascist army. And when one recalls the pastoral letter read in the churches of his diocese prior to the election, such practices indicate a lack of faith in popular government.

Mr. Montavon does not mention the aid given by Italy and Germany to the rebels. Equipment for the rebel armies, including heavy artillery, machine guns, rifles, trench helmets, tanks, aeroplanes, and field equipment have been provided by Mussolini and Hitler. Experienced officers and trained veterans have come from the same sources. It might be countered that Russia has aided the Spanish government. It is worthwhile remembering that Russia is interested in preserving the democratic government in any country which appears to be veering toward fascism, since Fascist governments are clearly hostile to Russia. On the other hand, democratic countries have indicated no aggressive hostility to Fascist nations. Why, therefore, are Germany and Italy attempting to destroy constitutional government in Spain?

The answer is obvious. Because fascism is incompatible with liberty. As long as a free country remains the dictator fears that his serfs may strive to emulate their more fortunate brothers in that country and throw off their chains. If one believes in democracy the only effective attitude one can have toward the Spanish situation is an admiration for the soldiers of democracy in Spain and a heartfelt hope that democracy will survive its present crucifixion.

On Mercy Deaths.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The subject of mercy deaths involves questions so profound that its approach as an issue may pre-empt a vaster working hypothesis of life.

Life is, of course, a handicap race, the chief handicap being what Aristotle called the inertia of matter. Our bodies are but vehicles. Two Washington scientists have just presented good examples of this fact in the changing of personalities by the operation of blocking out certain portions of the brain. There is a mental, spiritual and physical chemistry at work in every human life and so, because no two lives are alike, the wise and understanding will "judge not that they be not judged." We do not yet know what influence glands have on our undetachable citizens.

Yet we now know that the brain, as it thinks and concentrates, emits electrical impulses just about as a radio station broadcasts radio waves, and so, theoretically at least, it would seem that the body or vehicle is, or can be, under the power of the mind. There is a deep philosophy that the soul is sheathed in a succession of bodies or vehicles, each more attenuated. That the course of a body acts as an insulation until the mind or soul learns more of its lessons. Some disapprove of even capital punishment.

ment and give as their reason that to "unshackle" a murderer is simply to "step him up" and turn him loose on a higher plane before he has yet learned his lessons on this plane. The subject of mercy deaths may some day drive us nearer to the discovery of what life is all about.

A Questionable Arrest.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: You will recall that some time ago the crusade to stamp out speeding in the District was put into effect and with a notable effect.

The result was a noticeable decrease in speeding by irresponsible drivers. But like all well-meaning laws, it has developed into a racket under which the careful motorist is a potential victim.

I will cite a case. During the past week my friend, another man and myself were returning from a business trip into a nearby State. I have ridden many miles with my friend and knew him to be a careful driver and complying with the law as nearly as humanly possible. We had just entered the District and were proceeding through this most-traveled street when we passed an intersection and there on a side street we saw a motorcycle policeman. As we passed we remarked that he was waiting for a victim. We proceeded down the street at a careful speed, as it would have been impossible to speed if one should have been so minded, owing to heavy traffic. About a quarter of a mile from where we had seen the policeman we came upon a traffic congestion and had to come to a complete stop. While we were waiting the motorcycle policeman pulled up and told us to pull over to the curb. To say the least, we were stunned for a moment. The officer politely told my friend he was exceeding the speed limit. But to shorten the story, don't argue with the cop. So we did, and the ticket said 36 miles per hour. The result—traffic cop, a fine paid. Yes, a fellow could get a lawyer, but that would hardly pay, so we paid the fine.

The point I want to stress is when an officer wants a victim he will pick up a certain car, let it get a couple of squares ahead, then speed up to overtake you, look at his speedometer. Meanwhile that speed is put on your ticket. Simple, isn't it? Who will be next?

But above all, don't argue. He may be a generous cop and donate a few extra miles. E. H. H.

"Southern Women Defamed."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Only recently have I read the widely acclaimed book, "Gone With the Wind," and I wish to state, as a Southern woman, that it is a defamation of Southern women.

It is a most vulgar and coarse portrayal of women in general (in its heroine as pictured), and is a slur upon the womanhood of 1861-65, of which the South has ever been proud. Their lips have long been silent in death and they cannot now defend themselves from such an unwarranted attack.

One can easily understand that it is the sex stuff contained in the book which has made it a "best seller." I am thankful that there are many refined women of all sections of our country who are consoled by this book loudly. Its many editions should be consigned to a large bonfire.

The defamations of Southern womanhood in "Gone With the Wind" by Margaret Mitchell, is worse than the depredations of the Yankees.

The Post Impressionist

The Good Young Days.

CASUAL SMITH, following the example of Capt. Ebenezer Longbow, indulged in reminiscences the other day, and the old-timers at the Postoffice waiting for their mail were entertained.

It was Noel Coward's one-act plays that got him started, and the absence from Nelson Bell's comment of any reference to Rosina Vokes.

Rosina (said he) did exactly what Noel Coward is doing now, except that she didn't write her own plays. But she produced three plays every evening and a different three every night. Interesting little plays they were, too: "A Millionaire's Bill," "A Pair of Spectacles," "The Circus Rider," and the like.

That's darned near 50 years ago, if anybody should ask you, and so far as I know no celebrated actor has done anything of the kind since—till Coward got busy. Nor before Rosina did it, either.

No, I never met the lady, but after I had seen everything she produced for years I kind of felt I belonged to the family. And a very distinguished stage family it was. I was living in New York at the time and Daly's was my favorite theater. Every year Daly's company, Rosina Vokes and Sol Smith Russell took approximately three months apiece and the fourth quarter of the year the theater was dark. Russell confined himself to the one play. He had another besides "The Poor Relation," but I have forgotten what it was. But the Vokes and Daly engagements kept me hustling to the theater two or three times a week, for I made it a point not to miss any of the plays if it could possibly be avoided.

I don't know which of the two companies I enjoyed the more. Miss Vokes had in her support Courtney Thorpe, a good actor and something of a matinee idol, and Felix Morris (one of the very best stage old men). The program was usually so arranged that Miss Vokes appeared in two of three plays produced; Thorpe in two of the three, and Morris in two of the three.

Daly's company was always a delight. "As You Like It" was my favorite play; is still, I guess. I've seen many Rosinas, but of them all I think Ada Rehan the best. It is only fair to say that I have seen none in recent years. Others that stand out in my recollection are Kate Wallace (you probably never heard of her) and Mme. Modjeska. I liked Modjeska better in tragedy, but the one little bit in Rosaland that stood out was when she said to the duke, "My father was never a traitor! There wasn't much of it, but what little there was made the poor woman shrivel."

But Ada Rehan is the only Rosaland I see when I read the play. She had a grace and charm about her indescribable. Ann Harding in "Holidays" will give you some faint idea of her manner and personality.

John Drew was Orlando. I have always been willing to admit him a good actor, but I never warmed to him as a young man. He was, I thought, too what has later come to be called, "dead pan," and too studded in his movements. Many years later in the Little Theater, Philadelphia, I saw him play the part of a doddering old man, and got closer to him.

But there was no fault to be found with any member of the Daly cast. The sequence was played ably by Frederick Bond or Frederick d'Belleville, I have forgotten which. And James Lewis played Touchstone—Touchstone to the life.

The only part I thought miscast was that of Audrey. It jarred my youthful soul to see so beautiful a girl as Isabel Irving play the part of that unbecoming and frowny queen. I guess I was just a little bit sweet on Isabel (and you may tell her so if you happen to meet her.)

I look back with interest in those days because they marked the beginning of the modern school of acting; the end of the declamatory school. And it was curious to note that with the change of acting methods the stage itself changed in its physical appearance.

Two English tragedians, Bary Sullivan and Henry Irving, seen within a very few years of each other, and each playing Hamlet, brought the fact home to me. Sullivan played in an old theater, with comparatively little space back of the curtain but a lot in front of the curtain—the apron, as it was called. When the curtain rose the actors stepped out in front taking up their positions on the apron. Declamation seemed the natural and proper thing in such a cage. And so we heard Hamlet's soliloquy from Sullivan full-voiced and resonant. And, don't make any mistake, the method had its good points.

But Irving, playing in a modern theater, stayed back of the curtain, was part of a picture which the proscenium framed, and the soliloquy became very properly a soft-voiced self-talk.

That's getting away from Daly's, isn't it? Well, getting away from Daly's used to be interesting, too. I always bought hot corn on the cob from a street vender on the front platform of a street car with the driver, the horses going a good 3 miles an hour.

The good old days! The good old days! But what we old codgers always mean when we say it is, The good young days! The good young days! GRIF ALEXANDER.

Fair Enough

By
Westbrook Pegler.

Beaverbrook, Or Aiken.

LORD BEAVERBROOK, the London publisher, has made a breezy appearance on this shore, attended by big publicity. This will please him, because Lord Beaverbrook is more an act than a genuine personality.

In England his act is that of the exaggerated, fiction type of American go-getter, so dynamic and busy that he must dictate editorials into a hose attached to a recording machine while the English are naive about publishers for some reason, and they think he is a typical American king-maker doing it the American way.

Among us, the act is the same except that Beaverbrook likes to dazzle us with the spectacle of an English lord who speaks our language, doesn't roll up his pants, carry an umbrella or ask to be shown the Indians. It takes the edge off the act, however, to remember that Lord Beaverbrook is no Englishman, being a native of New Brunswick, and that under his lordship, which is a politician's scrapie, he is Max Aiken and so superman, but just a newspaper publisher.

IN ENGLAND, Beaverbrook is known as the man who introduced American methods, but American newspaper men in England realize what he really did introduce was a gun-chewing, well-timed burlesque of American journalism. The Beaverbrook pattern of newspaper, however, is the fact that the English do not, but him, and the result is something that is neither British nor American, but a pretty terrible thing of its own. The popular English papers fall for ancient publicity plants such as the hardy old spinster to the dancer who insures her legs for a million dollars.

Accompanied by a picture of the legs, they print ads for cancer cures and magic soap, and many of them are getting fat on advertisements for the most brazen swindle of the age, the English football pools, although the same publisher inveigled against the Irish sweepstakes on moral grounds and drove them out of print by law.

But of particular interest to Americans at the time of Max Aiken's visit to the United States is the role of British Lord is the fact that the English papers of the so-called American pattern make a specialty of American scandal and sex copy and pictures, but up to this time, have not even discovered a news relationship between the Simpson divorce and their own King.

Aiken says he knows nothing about any censorship of the Simpson story, and explained that the American stories about the woman and the King were based on interpretation. But, of course, you can interpret a story just by the skillful use of type and makeup, and the relative position of pictures on a page, and they go in for interpretation with great enthusiasm when the story affects Americans in Hollywood, Reno or New York.

So, it still looks as though the British press recognizes a difference between stories affecting commoners in a land which is their happy hunting ground for scandal and those relating to the young habitué of night clubs and fight clubs, not much different from the dashing sons of Long Island, who happens to be their King.

PERHAPS because I have enjoyed rather intimate glimpses of some famous publishers, including a few who were what we called the nut types, I am inclined to discount the importance of Lord Beaverbrook, and to remind myself that he is an act who enjoys to be regarded as a man of great, mysterious power in the world.

Moreover, the man is a political flirt, for not long ago he was playing footie with Adolf Hitler, and you would have thought he had full authority to represent the British Empire. And now the man who has been the savage dictator who slaughtered every institution which is dear to the British democracy discovers that the real affinity of Britain is the United States. He is an independent operator in these romantic speculations, but it is just as well to remember, when he tells us how devoted we are that he was telling Hitler the same thing a while back. He tells all us girls that.

Beaverbrook, or Aiken, came over to visit Arizona for his asthma, but got relief in the sea air, and casually announced that he might go on sailing back and forth on the Atlantic as long as he feels better. That, again, is the Beaverbrook act. In England it will be the impulsive act of an American go-getter, and we ourselves are supposed to marvel at the British lord who slings money around regardless and makes important decisions on the spur of the moment.

I'm as broad as can be.

Love will go where it's sent
And if it's being sent to a gent
Who happens to love it,
What of it?

I don't understand all the fuss;
What is it to us?
Whether Ed is for Becoming King of Baltimore
Or the lady becomes Queen Wally?
Why the arguments so brawly?

Whose business is it if
The King wants a "wife"?
And thinks the best grade
Is the American made?

Why the chatter, why,
If she wants a guy
Who has all those palaces
And practically no callous?
Who has all those horses and carriages
And no former marriages
Who can wear velvet knickers
Without arousing snickers
Who's as handsome as Gable
And looks convincing in sable?

Love is love
And even at the top
It can be non-stop.

It raises the devil
On any old level;
King or not immune
To songs of moon and June.
And there's something about Baltimore
That gets a man more and more.

Wally and Eddie
Look cute, really veddy,
Regardless of weather.
They seem walking on air—
Why the hell should we care?

Three cheers then for Eddie
And three years for his steady!
In a world as disrupted as this
It's a treat to see some one in bliss.
And hooray for any throne
Whose only hatred is living alone!
It would give this planet an upward shove
If the only thing it had on its mind was love.

YOU UNDERSTAND.

The mere fact that it doesn't look so permanent seems to be making WPA not so permanent.

Cat Out Of Bag

Baldwin's Reconciliation Of His Pre-Election Support For League And His Present Rearmament Enthusiasm Inadequate.

By David Wills.

Special Correspondence of The Post.

London.

"I BELIEVE," said Mr. Churchill in the House of Commons recently, "that in the next year or year and a half may be our last chance of averting a European conflict." Mr. Eden had just told the House that it was Britain's determination once again to take the lead, for which she needed strength of purpose and of arms. Mr. Eden suggested that Britain's policy should be first to "lead the world back into the paths of peace through toleration, the observance of international order, respect and support for such an order; and second to re-equip ourselves—rearm." The first policy he would achieve by an amendment to the Covenant of the League of Nations and by negotiating a western European pact of non-aggression.

These were nice words. Mr. Chamberlain and Mr. Churchill both commented on the large measure of agreement between members of the House on aims, if not on methods or speed of accomplishment. Mr. Baldwin a few days later made a similar declaration of determination to take a lead; he opposed communism and fascism, said freedom of the spirit is our contribution to the world for which we must be prepared to fight to the end.

And yet despite all this fine talk and agreement, the queer fact remains that the government is distinguished from its predecessors, according to critics of all political parties, by its complete lack of policy, its reputation for doing little and doing that wrong. Its appearance of strength comes largely from the fact that the opposition is distinguished by its complete stultification, as a political force, although the opposition electorate may be even larger than that for the government.

Conservative Paper

Scored Eden's Attitude.

RIGHT WING criticism of the Eden statement of policy was best summed up by the Morning Post, diatribe Conservative paper, which criticized Eden's speech as a persistent turning of the blind eye to failure, because he still spoke nicely of the League. England should rearm; avoid Geneva; form a military alliance with France; be friendly to Germany but suspicious of German imperialism; refuse to join with Germany in anti-Bolshevik crusade.

The Daily Telegraph reflects the government policy more accurately with its amazing statement that "any discussion of foreign affairs would be futile that did not make it plain that nothing will now change our resolve to make ourselves so strong that our views on international affairs have weight and our friendship be worth the seeking."

One shudders for the government which acts upon a policy so crammed with fallacies. At present our navy is supreme in Europe by a long margin; our air force is more modern and efficient than the German, and is about equal in numbers.

We are held in slighting regard by some countries of Europe not because we are militarily weak, but because we lack strength of purpose in the support of the League which we offered in the Abyssinian affair. If we show willingness to co-operate and stick to our professed purposes, we would have sufficient supporting countries to make our combined military strength irresistible. That our friendship is worth seeking is demonstrated by every move of Germany and Italy; the one aim of the dictators at present is to secure our friendship, either by gentle words, by threats, or by bluff, so that they may have a free hand elsewhere.

The Daily Herald, along with all other papers, indorses Eden's conditions for accepting German friendship: "that it is neither exclusive, nor directed against any one country. But it regrets his complete disclaimer of responsibility for Germany's economic difficulties. We may properly assume, says the Herald, 1 per cent of responsibility, through the Treaty of Versailles, and that 1 per cent we should remove by opening the British Colonial Empire on equal terms to the trades of all nations."

Nation Suspects

Purpose Of New Arms.

CONTRAST that last proposal with the resolution passed at the last Conservative Party conference which refused under any circumstances to alienate one shred of our imperial possessions, and one of the causes of the uneasy feeling in the country may be seen. The one policy which the government now pursues with enthusiasm, although not with efficiency according to critics, is rearmament. The uneasy majority of the country suspects that this rearmament is to be used in defense of nothing but the old imperial interests which landed Europe in the last war. Nothing seems to have been learned, except new methods of slaughter.

From the debate may be gathered a number of points which strengthened that suspicion. Mr. Eden said:

Off the Record.

By Ed Reed

"Okay, Jeeves, you can go back home, here's the bank!"

The Showdown

By Barnet Nover.

The Significance Of Franco's Threat.

GEN. FRANCISCO FRANCO has not yet captured Madrid. Two weeks of almost incessant bombardment of that city has resulted in an enormous casualty list and the destruction of a vast amount of property. But the struggle for the possession of the capital remains in a state of deadlock. The possibility remains that the rebels may be defeated. And by a curious paradox, the center of international interest in the Spanish crisis has actually shifted during the last few days from Madrid to Barcelona.

Gen. Franco has declared that unless the Catalan capital, which is also Spain's most populous and enterprising city, surrenders, it will be starved out by blockade and destroyed by bombardment.

AT FIRST GLANCE this threat seems utterly fantastic. The distance between Madrid and Barcelona is 425 miles, over rugged terrain that is peculiarly adapted to guerrilla warfare. With his limited manpower it might take Franco months to reach that city. For it can be taken for granted that his march would be opposed every inch of the way.

The Catalans have been unable to make any great headway in capturing Saragossa, the rebel stronghold, 191 miles from Barcelona. But practically the whole region from Saragossa to Barcelona is at the moment free of rebel control. In defense of their liberties the Catalans can be expected to put up as good a fight as have the people of Madrid.

Under the circumstances, the bombardment of Barcelona from the air, if that proves feasible, would be even more an act of sheer vandalism than the bombardment of Madrid has been. For while you can destroy, you cannot occupy a city by means of the air power.

At the same time, Franco is obviously in no position to establish an unaided blockade of Barcelona or any other Loyalist port on the eastern coast of Spain. Only few Spanish warships are in rebel hands; the bulk of the navy has remained loyal to the government.

WHY THEN have Franco's threats aroused such alarm in London and Paris? Why are French and British statesmen taking them seriously? Indeed, the British, for their part, have got into touch with Franco and have proposed what seems almost like a deal to recognize his belligerence in return for the establishment in Barcelona Harbor of a lane of safe conduct for British ships.

One thing is plain. British statesmen are not in the least the victims of exaggerated fears. On the contrary, in viewing the threat to blockade and bombard Barcelona as a real possibility they are taking a very realistic stand.

The reason for this is that Franco is only a puppet. When he made his threat against Barcelona it was not his voice but those of his German and Italian masters who spoke. Rome and Berlin, very obviously, are determined that their prestige is not to be impaired. And it might be impaired to a very dangerous degree by the victory of the loyalists whom Russia has been supporting.

That is why, in Franco's failure to capture Madrid, they recognized the rebel regime as the de facto government of Spain. And, having done so, it would be a simple matter for the two dictatorships to establish a formal alliance with Franco and place at his disposal not only his military and air forces but also their navies. They are in a position to blockade Barcelona even though Franco himself is not.

THE PROBLEM facing Great Britain, among other countries, is what its attitude should be in the event of a blockade nominally established by the rebels but actually carried out by Italy and Germany.

Three courses would be open to the British, all of them unpleasant. They could, in the first place, tacitly recognize such a blockade as effective and take no action to prevent their ships from being held up or boarded. Trading with Catalonia would, so far as the London government is concerned, be at the mercy of the rebel government. It would be an extremely unpleasant course to take. But it would have the advantage, regarded by the government of that land as paramount, of not getting the nation mixed up in the eyes of the British public, convert it to rearmament and isolation, and almost complete vindication in Baldwin's cold explanation of how he won the general election of 1935.

The second course would be to refuse to recognize such a blockade as effective and take no action to prevent their ships from being held up or boarded. Trading with Catalonia would, so far as the London government is concerned, be at the mercy of the rebel government. It would be an extremely unpleasant course to take. But it would have the advantage, regarded by the government of that land as paramount, of not getting the nation mixed up in the eyes of the British public, convert it to rearmament and isolation, and almost complete vindication in Baldwin's cold explanation of how he won the general election of 1935.

The third course would be to refuse to recognize the blockade as valid and treat all interferences by Spanish rebels with British shipping as acts of piracy. This would mean that British ships would be free to attack and sink any Spanish ships found in the area. But it might easily involve the British in difficulties not only with Franco, whom they may not fear, but with Italy and Germany as well, which is what neither the British nor the French have any desire to do.

The third course would be voluntarily to refrain from running the blockade by withdrawing all their shipping from the waters off the east coast of Spain. Any Americans want this to be the policy of the United States and some Englishmen have seriously proposed it as the wisest course for the least. But it would be unheroic, to say the least. In any case, it is clear that in practically declaring Spain a Fascist colony, Italy and Germany have thrown down the gauntlet of battle to Great Britain, France and, not least, Russia, whose shipments to Barcelona have particularly aroused the ire of the Fascist dictatorships.

THE anxiety of the "mistress of the seas" in the face of a threat from the Spanish rebel navy, with practically no navy is a clear indication that there is no to the developing "Barcelona crisis" than meets the eye.

English Optimist

By William Lyon Phelps

G. K. Chesterton.

Yesterday I discussed the poems of a great English pessimist; today I discuss the prose of a great English optimist. Like Theodore Roosevelt, had a bully time. He had enormous gusto for living. He used to say he hoped he would never grow too old to enjoy everything. And he never did. Daily life remained to him a marvel and a delight. He never took anything for granted. He was grateful for the gift of life, for the free show of the of the spectacular universe. And for the amazing variety of men and women that made the world so interesting. Goethe said all theories were gray; it was the tree of life that was always green.

Mr. Housman and Mr. Chesterton were both Englishmen living in England, a country the size of Michigan or North Carolina. They were both highly intelligent men, with brilliant minds. They were both sincere. They both wanted to speak the truth. Looking steadfastly at the same object—human life in England—Housman was a pessimist and Chesterton an optimist.

Mr. Chesterton in this autobiography gives us a key to his optimism. Listen to this: "The aim of life is appreciation; there is no sense in having more of them if you have less appreciation of them." The real difficulty of man is not to enjoy lamp-posts or landscapes, not to enjoy dandelions or chaps; but to enjoy enjoyment. To keep the capacity of really liking things, that is the practical problem."

Then having given us this key, he gives another; the road to appreciation lies only through humility. And by humility he does not mean anything cringing or slinking, but a capacity for gratitude. You cannot have a good time without the capacity for gratitude.

This book is chockful of amusing anecdotes and portraits of famous men. He writes here again what he told me once; and while it may be regarded as trivial, to me it is outstanding. He opposed the Boer War in 1900; and when he was making a speech against it, he was attacked by a mob and during the row somebody stole his watch. He never got another; from 1900 to 1936 he never carried or owned a watch. As he was one of the busiest men in the universe, he asked him how he managed to get along without one. "Oh, if I really want to know what time it is, I ask somebody."

Madrid Today

Recent Visitor To Spanish Capital Visualizes Scenes In Prisons And Hotels As Rebel Forces Approach.

By James M. Hepburn.

Special Correspondence of The Post.

ACCORDING TO recent press dispatches, three shells have struck the Prison Modelo at Madrid, killing ten persons and causing the government there to begin the evacuation of the prisoners held in that famous institution. It happened that I stood within the walls of this so-called model prison on July 18, that fatal day when the opening shots of the revolution stirred all of Europe. Not as a prisoner, I am glad to say, but engaged in a study of the manner in which political prisoners are handled in this great Spanish Bastille.

At the time of my inspection

there were some 1,400 prisoners, less than 100 of whom were confined for criminal offenses. Since political prisoners in Spain cannot be compelled to work, little if any labor is carried on save that connected with the maintenance of the institution itself. During the day the inmates are allowed to congregate in the great corridor upon which the four or five tiers of cells face. I saw some of those serving time for criminal offenses were making small objects by hand. I recall one man in particular who was manufacturing rather attractive lamp shades, decorated, of course, with that idiom even more popular in Spain than in America—Mickey Mouse.

One criminal long-term was occupying his time by taming and training an English sparrow. The little bird would fly about the cell, perch on the prisoner's hand and upon a command, from his master would turn over on its back and "play dead."

One whole section was given over to the housing of royalists and aristocrats. My attention was attracted by a number of beds—far from average prison equipment—which had been brought in from the outer world. In another ward I found the men living in dormitory fashion. Both groups had their meals sent in either from their homes or from the better restaurants of the city.

Prisoners Feasting At Start Of Rebellion.

ON THIS DAY of which I speak—the beginning of the revolution—they seemed to be feasting. A long table was laden with food and wine and the great hampers in which the supplies had been brought in stood near by. This, I might add, was just before the rebelling garrison in Madrid had been taken and the officers shot down. Their "feast of liberation," if such it was, came a bit too soon.

The prison, built 30 or 40 years ago, is constructed along traditional lines. There are several penal institutions in this country which resemble it very closely; Joliet, for example. The plan, roughly, consists of a central building from which radiate, as if from the hub of a wheel, some six or eight wings. It differs from American prisons, however, in that there is but one tier of cells.

Formerly it was possible for guards to watch from this central building and, if necessary, to train machine guns down each individual wing. But in recent years, since the building has become more a political and less a penal one, huge walls blocking off each wing have been erected. This has made possible the more complete segregation of the various political groups. And speaking of political groups, some one has said that if there were only six Spaniards left in the world there would be seven political parties.

The Prison Modelo long has been identified with the political life and history of Spain. Just a few nights before Alfonso XIII fled to France in 1931, he was walking in the street near and was imprisoned so it is said by the great number of persons whom he saw going in and out.

A check-up which he made the following day revealed the amazing fact that a male prisoner—the very man who later became the first President of the present republic—had had 1,700 visitors within 24 hours! According to prison records, they all had been "relatives."

Fantastic Stories Swirl About Prison.

SO MANY weird and fantastic stories have been written and told about this famous place, both before and since the revolution, that it is difficult to separate fact from fiction. For example, I read last spring in the magazine Time that Jose Primo de Rivera had escaped from its walls. Yet the head of the prison, when I questioned him about it last summer, denied that De Rivera had ever even been a prisoner there, explaining that he had been confined in another political prison elsewhere in Spain.

When the revolution had been in progress but a few weeks I heard that the entire place had been evacuated after a fire in one of its many wings. Those persons confined on criminal charges were allowed to go free while the political prisoners were all shot down as they fled out.

Now, according to the latest story, three shells struck the prison, only recently, killing ten persons and causing the government to begin the evacuation of prisoners! Just which is true I do not know.

So far, however, no shells seem to have hit the Women's Prison, which is situated in another section of Madrid. This institution, truly a modern and model one, was built only three or four years ago by Victoria Kent, the first director general of prisons under the republic. Here, too, are housed all children of prisoners provided the youngsters are not over seven years of age. For in Spain, as in certain other continental countries, the young children of women criminals accompany their mothers to prison.

Shells Drop Near Old Refugee Station.

I CAN WELL visualize the wild and harrowing scenes in Madrid today as it is being torn with shells from landed ships. When I read that shells had dropped near the

State Trooper Denies Charge He Took Graft

Ousted Officer on Trial at First of Hearings in Baltimore.

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, Nov. 23.—J. J. Thompson, State trooper suspended on merit system violation charges, denied before Employment Commissioner Harry C. Jones today that he had ever "accepted fees or gratuities" in line of duty.

Thompson also denied charges of assaulting J. Frank Amos, of Forest Hill, and of using "vulgar and offensive language" in front of Amos and a woman companion—Miss Sarah E. Jones, of Baltimore.

Thompson's testimony climaxed the first of four hearings Commissioner Jones scheduled for Thompson and three other State troopers suspended by Maj. Enoch B. Garey, State police superintendent.

Asserting he had heard little to connect Thompson with alleged "grafting," Commissioner Jones closed the hearing with the comment he would reserve decision pending disposition of the remaining cases.

The morning session was given over to examination of charges Thompson "demanded and extorted" money from J. N. Herbert, garage proprietor at Savage.

Statement Denied.

Herbert, the day's first witness, denied he had paid Thompson any money, directly or indirectly, and denied he had made a statement to that effect in the presence of Maj. Garey.

James Hebron, director of the Baltimore Criminal Justice Commission; Detective Sgt. Andrew Linhard and Wilbur Conroy, and J. E. Taylor, another of the suspended troopers, were present.

Herbert asserted he was "under the weather" from liquor on the night the statement was written by Linhard at a meeting in Maj. Garey's home. Herbert said he had been given beer by Linhard and whiskey by Maj. Garey during the evening.

Hebron testified Herbert was sober on the night in question, had approved, signed, and discussed "again and again" such a statement, implicating all four of the State troopers. The statement was introduced as evidence.

Frequently, during Hall's questioning of witnesses, Maj. Garey rose to object to the line of questioning. At one point, when the attorney was inquiring of Linhard if the detective had not once been charged with funds shortages in the motor vehicle commissioners' office, Garey's protest was overruled by Jones.

A moment later, the State police chief jumping to his feet again, in the midst of his protest, Hall exclaimed: "Teacher, please sit down!"

Unexpectedly, Hall asked Cassidy where food supplies had been obtained for the State police pistol matches at Camp Ritchie in September. Jones interrupted to assert he did not believe the question relevant to the case.

Gifts Charged.

"I want to show," Hall replied, "that Maj. Garey approve of taking gratuities although he has placed charges against Patrolman Thompson for the same thing."

"I can prove that among the gratuities he accepted were two barrels of beer from one brewer, two barrels from another, two quarter-barrels from another, 150 pounds of sausage from a meat dealer, quantities of butter, coffee and bread, which were consumed by the State police and himself."

"Maj. Garey is not on trial," Jones answered. "That is a matter for the Governor to settle."

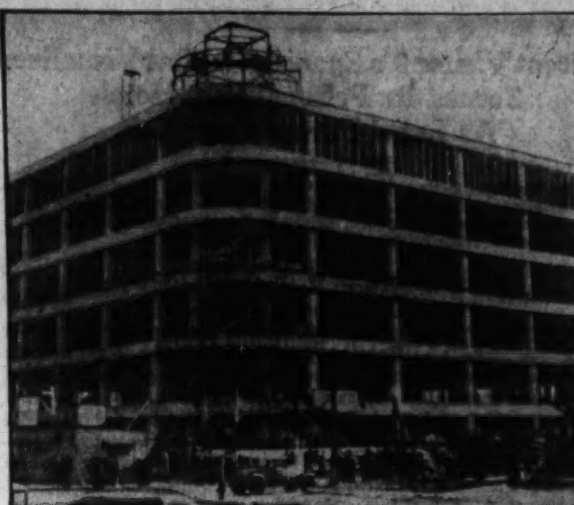

"I hereby register a formal protest against this," he said. "I am not on trial."

New Hecht Warehouse Dedicated

Hecht Officially At Dedication Of Warehouse

Head of Department Store Pledges New Place to Public Service.

The new Hecht Co. warehouse, a $1,000,000 six-story structure at New York avenue and Fenwick street northeast, was dedicated yesterday with speeches by District Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen, Senator Millard F. Tydings, of Maryland, and store officials.

Alexander Hecht, president of the company, sealed the cornerstone of the building and declared: "I dedicate this building to the people of Washington, in the spirit of service."

Commenting on the fact that the new Hecht structure is the largest warehouse south of New York, Senator Tydings said:

"While it bears the commonplace title of warehouse, its builders have seen to it that its architecture is in harmony with comparable new Government buildings, while ventilating, illuminating, fireproof sprinkler system, a two-way loud-speaker system connecting the entire building, the new display windows to be built and the other far-reaching features which this building will portray all show not only keen business acumen but, with that concept, there is likewise expressed here the desire to beautify, as well as to promote the improving appearance of the great Capital City of the United States."

"Here in Washington, as in Baltimore, the Hecht Co. stands for something finer than just the sale of commodities," Tydings declared. "Assuring that the continued growth of Washington seems assured, Commissioner Hazen remarked that 'well-ordered means of distribution of goods, wares and merchandise spread the joys and comforts of good living through the community.'"

Hazen complimented Alexander and Moses Hecht and General Manager Charles B. Dulcan, sr., on the building and paid tribute to the "intelligent planning and faithful execution of well-laid plans" required to build it.

Zoning Debate Over Abattoirs Planned Today

29 Other Noxious Types of Business, Subject of Proposed Law.

Regulations which will bring the construction of abattoirs and 29 other industries that engage in noxious pursuits under control of the District Zoning Commission will be debated at a public hearing today, beginning at 10 a. m., in the board room of the District Building.

An outgrowth of the controversy which has developed over the efforts of Adolf Gobel, Inc., to reopen and expand its Northeast plant, the regulations were proposed by a special committee named by the District Commissioners.

In the place of a general regulation which states that in industrial districts "all buildings and premises may be used without restriction except such as are imposed by law or municipal regulation" the proposed substitute lists 30 industries, headed by abattoirs, which must be approved by the Zoning Commission before a building permit may be issued.

Sponsors hold that such a regulation would enable the commission to prevent reopening of an abattoir such as proposed by the Gobel company in the Northeast if, after an examination of plans and adjacent territory, it were found to be not in the public interest. It would not be retroactive, however.

Another regulation before the commission is designed to add to the list of industries barred from second commercial districts.

Fourteen businesses are added to the list now listed in Section V of the zoning regulations.

Capt. Hugh P. Oram, director of inspection, explained that the new regulations are designed to modernize in a degree Washington's obsolete zoning control.

District officials plan to seek an entirely new zoning act at the next session of Congress.

Man, 80, Commits Suicide; His Note Bans Any Service

"Cremate my body and bury me without religious services." These were the simple instructions in a note found yesterday after Stephen Hart, 80-year-old resident manager of an apartment at 1309 Eleventh street northwest, killed himself in his room.

Hart's body was found slumped on the kitchen floor by Odell Osborn, janitor, when he traced a gas odor to Hart's room. Corner A. Magruder MacDonald issued a certificate of suicide.

Friends of Hart made inquiries for him earlier in the day when they failed to hear the strains of "Nearer My God to Thee" coming from Hart's room. They say the old man played the hymn every morning from a battered piano which he kept in the kitchen.

Three notes were found in the room. All were addressed to friends of the dead man but none gave any reason for the act. Police reported acquaintances as saying Hart suffered financial reverses during the last few years.

Turkey Rescued From Kidnapers 'Jailed' by Police

Sultan, a fine Virginia turkey, tonight achieved the dubious honor of being the first gobbler ever held in jail here.

Trolley Riders Accept Revised Routes Calmly

Only Minor Difficulties Encountered in Shift, Transit Firm Says.

Slightly bewildered when street cars departed from their usual routes for strange destinations, Washington's car riding public yesterday accepted the rerouting plan of the Capital Transit Co. good naturedly during the rush hours.

Robert Dougan, assistant to the president of the transit company, said that although some of the cars were running "a little behind time" the three major changes and about a dozen minor ones were put into effect without difficulty.

Motormen and conductors were besieged with questions from passengers unable to grasp the meaning of the large route numbers which appeared for the first time in the street car windows.

To add to the difficulty the motormen were operating over unfamiliar tracks and several times their cars were caught in cut-outs and switches. Conductors had trouble calling the names of the strange streets they passed.

The rerouting was designed to distribute cars over parallel routes to reduce congestion on any single street. The chief changes affected lines from outlying area to or near the Federal triangle.

in Omaha, Neb., had been reprimanded by Secretary Ickes because "a couple of highballs" were served in Dodds' Government office. The reprimand was issued September 16 and officials here say they regard the incident as closed.

These statements on the label are dependable guides to the kind of whiskey you want.

In a straight whiskey, "proof" is a most important thing to look for. It's the measure of strength and, hence, a measure of value. But some people assume that a straight whiskey at full strength, 100 proof, lacks smoothness. Every rule has its exceptions. We believe ... and ever-mounting sales seem to prove ... that Old Mr. Boston Straight Whiskey is a notable exception ... a full, 100 proof Straight Whiskey that is as honey-smooth as any straight whiskey you have ever tasted.

26,000,000 Pension Blanks Go to Workers

Government Is Gratiified by Co-operation of Big Business.

By the Associated Press.

Ready for the stupendous job of assigning "account numbers" to 26,000,000 workers, Government officials said last night business in general and big business in particular were co-operating heartily with arrangements for the Federal pension system.

This morning postment will begin delivering applications for the accounts of employees on the basis of reports employers were required to make by last Saturday night. If an employer reported one or a hundred people in his hire as many forms will be delivered to his shop with a few to spare. The employees have until December 5 to return their questionnaires.

Since the deadline for the employer to apply for an "identification number" has passed, questions about the Government's attitude toward those who refused or failed to do so were being asked of the Internal Revenue Bureau yesterday.

Officials said each case would be decided on its merits, without any wish either to be lenient to violators of the law or to take a "crack down" approach. Until a specific case came up, there appeared to be little likelihood of a ruling on the subject. Neither was there any apparent prospect of an extension of the deadline. No data was yet available on how many employers refused to co-operate.

Revenue officials and Jesse M. Donaldson, Deputy First Assistant of the Internal Revenue Bureau, expressed gratification for co-operation from business. "Some of the biggest corporations," said Donaldson, "are setting aside office space and hiring help for their employees to apply for pension accounts. Many employees will even find the date and their names already entered on the card for them."

Goodyear Aide at Hoover Field Describes Trip on Hindenburg

By Howard F. Wentworth.

A raging gale swept the Atlantic Ocean. Brilliant lightning bolts danced across the inky wastes. Low-hanging clouds and leaping waves almost met in mid-air.

A torrential rain beat against the sides of a mammoth bulk gliding through the storm—the dirigible Hindenburg was battling its way from Lakehurst, N. J., to Frankfurt, Germany.

Again and again, the angry elements pitted their strength against the man-made conqueror of space. And again and again the giant dirigible spouted defiance with spurts of flame from her powerful engines.

Unaware that anything unusual was taking place, 60-odd passengers, comfortable in gayly lighted saloons, lounged in easy chairs, read or sipped drinks from a modern bar. There was no motion, no noise, nothing to indicate what was happening on the outside.

In a forward control room stood Commander Karl Lange, former U. S. Navy flier and now chief of the Goodyear airbase at Hoover Field. Far from his attractive young wife and infant son, awaiting him here at the Westchester Apartments, Commander Lange looked from an observation window—at the swirling sea below.

Traveled as Observer.

It was his first transatlantic trip aboard the Hindenburg. He had been assigned as an observer for the Goodyear company. The journey was half-over. At midnight that night they had left Lakehurst. And the following night Commander Lange was eating dinner in a Frankfurt hotel—just 43 hours from the United States.

And yesterday, back at his desk in the Goodyear hanger at Hoover Field, Commander Lange was asked how it felt to fly through a raging storm in mid-ocean? Leaning back in his chair, he laughed and said:

"There wasn't any feeling to it. Unless we looked from an observation window and saw the rain, we didn't know there was a storm in progress."

"But you must have received some sort of thrill," his questioner insisted.

"Oh, sure," he replied. "I got a thrill all right—but it was the next morning when we sighted a couple of icebergs and a school of whales."

And in two round trips aboard the Hindenburg, the icebergs and whales remained Commander Lange's greatest thrill. He was loud in his praise of lighter-than-air craft for ocean travel, and predicted increased popularity for this mode of transportation.

"Even now," he said, "Germany is constructing two more dirigibles—as large and larger than the Hindenburg. If the United States could purchase patent rights to these ships, there is no reason why we couldn't build them ourselves."

The Hindenburg, Commander Lange declared, is like "a flying hotel." Every cabin has hot and cold running water and the entire craft is air conditioned.

"The only trouble I had," he continued, "was eating. There are so many changes in time during the crossing that meals roll around every few hours. I guess I ate four meals a day just to keep up with the clock."

Washington, he said, would be an ideal place for the Hindenburg's American base. Hybla Valley, Va., already has received the approval of Commander Hugo Eckener, German dirigible expert, and the second best location is near Baltimore.

"The lighter-than-aircraft is the Utopia of transportation," Commander Lange declared. "Already, it has been recognized in regular scheduled trips between Germany and South America."

Although the Hindenburg averaged more than 100 miles an hour during the flights, Commander Lange said there was no sensation of flying, no noise and no vibration. Often they came down to within 200 feet of the water "just to look around."

In addition to thousands of pounds of food and drink, the huge ship carried a spare motor and complete repair shop. Eight stewards are employed to wait upon passengers and three cooks prepare "excellent meals."

Bombed Bridges Slow Franco's Legions in March on Madrid

The Post is the only daily morning paper in Washington with A.P. WIREPHOTO Service.

MADRID FRONT.—One of the bridges blown up by retreating loyalist troops that fled during the rebels' relentless drive on the Spanish capital. (Right) Cameramen and war correspondents perched atop high building on outskirts of Madrid to observe engagements between Fascists and loyalists.

MEXICO'S ANTI-FASCISTS.—On twenty-sixth anniversary of revolution that ended Diaz's 30-year dictatorship, radical laborers staged a huge mass meeting in plaza fronting Mexico City's ancient cathedral, where speakers denounced fascism.

DOUBLE REWARD.—Joseph E. Davies, newly appointed Ambassador to Russia, embraced by his lovely wife after he had taken the oath of office at the State Department yesterday in the presence of most of official Washington.

Mae West's Headache.

NATIONAL CITY BANK officials, disturbed over the rumors regarding Clifford Odets' forthcoming play about Cuba and banking interests there, are investigating privately—to learn what it's all about. Frank Wallace still is a headache to Mae West. Her alleged former husband had made arrangements to appear at cafes in every city where Mae was to make personal appearances, and thus cash in on the publicity.

A GROUP OF MEN who backed London during the campaign will soon publish a magazine similar to Fortune. Reginald Wright Kaufman is expected to be the editor. It will appear at about the time Roosevelt is inaugurated again. The office is lavishly furnished with desks and chairs which once occupied Republican campaign headquarters. But furniture for the research workers comes from Democratic headquarters!

THE SONG, "These Foolish Things," was introduced first in England by Hildegarde, the songstress. The author of that song, a sailing-away girl, presented her with his newest composition, "If I Were Ginger Rogers and You Were Fred Astaire." Hildegarde thanked him, and asked why the generosity. "Don't worry," he assured her, "it's not a commercial song." Yesterday she sold the time to Shapell and Bernstein for $8,000. Rudy Wallace will switch back to the Fleischmann broadcasts soon.

BEFORE SHE SAILED for Europe, Peggy Joyce introduced her newest song to a group of us. "He has thousands of kisses on his Virginia estate," Peggy intoned, "but I'm so tired of kisses. I think I'll go to England." She did to meet Vivian Jackson, her newest fiancé, who is a jockey.

LUPE VELEZ didn't lose by agreeing to work in "Transatlantic Rhythm." She's been singing for British films. Radio advertising is going strip-tease. The Don Lee Network has a show, bathing-suit models, with the caption "It's What You Cover That Counts."

Idle Chatter

HOLLYWOOD, NOV. 23.

Clark Gable and Janet Gaynor are better looking today than when they were extras together 12 years ago. Nutshell descriptions of the

Marx Brothers' Maniacs. Alice White is telling folks her diary makes Mary Astor's read like a book. Pass from the same pod? Freddie Bartholomew and Billy Mauch. New Sparks has been in extreme ill health for years. Few more interesting conversationalists than Eric Blore or Arthur Treacher. Three "sore" ("I am sorry") cost Hollywood $1,000,000 annually; actors use them to express regrets over missing scenes.

Candidate for most exciting neck: Madeleine Carroll. Many angry mamas at Santa Monica since Jean Harlow taught little girls there to use raw eggs to hold mud pie together. Scene stealer: Misha Auer. A few minutes under the sun and Katharine Hepburn is a freckle patch. Charlie Chaplin is least conscious of flashlights; any old angle photographers shoot from is okay with Charles. "Cleverest picture title of the month": "Melody For Two." Arline Judge is well aware of her cute figure; she wears shorts and bathing suits on slightest provocation. Few realize it, but during his five years on the screen, Johnny Weissmuller has enacted but one characterization: Tarsan. Gertrude Neissen looks too plumpish in evening gowns, but trim as a yacht in tailored suits.

Note showed beneath my door: "I saw Greta Garbo in a drug store on Sunset Boulevard. She was dressed in a badly fitting, tweed suit, floppy brown hat, and wore dark glasses. She didn't even cause a ripple among customers or clerks."

"Winter" Loses Sociological Power, But Gains in Popular Appeal in Film Form; Irene Dunne Blossoms Out as a Comedienne of First Rank; Special Schedules in Picture Houses; Miss Cornell's Third "Gallery of Stage Portraits."

IT MUST, no doubt, be admitted that the RKO-Radio film version of Maxwell Anderson's prize-winning "Winter" has been converted into a more popular box-office attraction than strict adherence to the original script might have evolved.

A grim and forbidding tragedy has been translated from its impressive blank verse form into a drama recited in simple prose—except for one or two speeches retained intact from the play—and given a conventional cinematic "happy ending." These are sops to the Cerebrus of fancied public taste that still represent a lamentable tendency of the motion picture to "write down" to its public.

In this day and age, this seems to me a totally unnecessary precaution. I am unable to perceive any difference between the audience at Loew's Capitol or the Warner Brothers' Earle and those that assemble in the National Theater. I recognize the same faces, the same intelligence and the same appreciation in all of them.

However that may be, "Winter," I think—my distinguished confreres who previewed the film in New York to the contrary, notwithstanding—has been largely denatured in its transition to the screen. It has lost Maxwell Anderson's primary purpose of pointing the futility of the underprivileged, the downtrodden and the persecuted; it evades the tragic import of the original play by making concessions to mass taste which are not justified by any artistic consideration, but only by the coffers' lust for gold.

Prefixed to the movement of the play, as Anderson wrote it, is a complete sequence depicting the pay roll murder for which Romagna was unjustly convicted and executed, his trial and the gloomy business of his electrocution as viewed by his wife and small son from the heights overlooking the penitentiary.

Sixteen years later the story of the original play is picked up and pursued with absolute fidelity until the arrival of the twisted climax. Here Trock and Garth, two of the leaders in the murder, are slain and Mio and Miriamne escape death in exact contravention of the logical conclusion of the premise that Anderson has set up and defended by every speech in his drama.

His play won the New York's Critics' Circle Award as the best of its year. I doubt if it would have done so in the form that has been devised for the film version of the piece.

These remarks, of course, will be pertinent only to those who saw the play on the stage. They probably will be slightly offended, as I am, that the cinema should have deemed it necessary to upset what was a strong sociological document, whether you agreed with it or not, for the sake of providing a picture which it was deemed would be "a lot more fun."

Incidentally, it would be well to give close heed to the time schedules of performances at RKO-Keith's today. "The Luckiest Girl in the World" will be continued only through the 6:32 p. m. performance, following which the house will be emptied, preparatory to two evening showings of "Winter," at 8:14 and 10 p. m. Make no mistake about this being a picture that no one should permit himself to miss. It is a superb bit of craftsmanship, even if it does lose something of its original power. But this, as I have said, will be evident only to those who saw the play on the stage.

A new Irene Dunne will be revealed to those who view her performance in "Theodore Goes Wild," on the screen at the Earle beginning Friday. The star whose talents have for the most part been dedicated to emotional and musical roles—"Back Street," "Cimarron," "Roberta," "Show Boat"—and the like—now emerges as a gay and resourceful comedienne of the first rank, singing only a little, emoting not at all and altogether having herself a time in the high or festive manner.

Previewed yesterday afternoon before an audience that comfortably filled the Warner projection room in the Earle Theater Building, "Theodore Goes Wild" proved one of the most exhilarating screen comedies of the year. It moves swiftly and logically, displays sharp contrasts in characterization and altogether fulfills every requirement of a frolic that hovers continuously over the borderline between straight comedy and farce.

Miss Dunne is fortunate in the selection Columbia Pictures made for her leading man. Melvyn Douglas does as fine a piece of frivolous work in this subject as he did serious in "The Gorgeous Hussy." There is a canine actor in "Theodore Goes Wild" that occasionally steals scenes from the principals. Since he is as good an actor as he is, that is all right with me and probably will be with you.

It is a source of keen regret that yesterday's inescapable official duties prevented attendance at the preview of "Broken Blossoms," next attraction at the Belasco Theater. This British-made version of the story that was first celebrated on the screen under the direction of David Wark Griffith, with Richard Barthelmess and Lillian Gish starred, will open on Lafayette Square tomorrow night at a distinguished inaugural to be attended by a long list of notables representing the official, social and commercial life of the National Capital. A novel feature of this premiere will be the actual broadcasting of the picture over WOL from 9 to 9:15 p. m. A new-fangled and super-sensitive microphone will be placed in a specially reserved orchestra chair and air listeners thus will be enabled to hear, if not see, important sequences of the play. Earlier in the evening, Earl Brown will announce the arriving dignitaries from 8:15 to 8:30.

The fourth edition of "Katharine Cornell: A Gallery of Stage Portraits," a handsomely contrived brochure, has just come to hand and is a welcome and valuable addition to those which have gone before. It presents Miss Cornell in a series of her most notable portrayals and also includes informal portraits of her and her husband, Guthrie McClintic, and her and her mother, when Miss Cornell was a babe in arms.

Miss Cornell's latest starring vehicle, "The Wingless Victory," by Maxwell Anderson, opens at the National Theater tonight—a fact which seems already to have been more or less bruited about, judging from the lines at the box office and the scarcity of seats for all performances.

Reveals a New Flair for Comedy

Irene Dunne, when you see her in "Theodore Goes Wild," the new Columbia production opening at the Warner Brothers' Earle Theater on Friday, will establish herself in your memory not only as one of the cinema's most accomplished sopranos but also as one of its most vivacious comediennes. Miss Dunne never before has done anything quite like Theodore. Her leading man is Melvyn Douglas, playing in top form.

CHAPTER XV.

Lelia was furious. Becky saw with astonishment that her lovely face could be as hard as Regina's when she was angry. Philip's attitude remained as gallant as ever but she made no response to his conversational advances. When they were leaving Regina said, "You won't reconsider, Phil?" "Sorry," he answered pleasantly. "I can't." He accompanied them to their car, returning to the library to find Becky putting on her hat. "Are you going already?" he asked. "Not if you need me," she replied, taking her seat at the desk. Philip looked embarrassed. "Have you a date for tonight?" She shook her head and suddenly the mask he had been wearing dropped from his face, leaving it young and eager. "Perhaps you won't object then to having dinner with me?" he asked as if afraid she might refuse. "But you told Mrs. Meade that you had an engagement." "I had," he declared. "Ever since this morning I promised myself to spend the evening with you. If you'd let me..." "You thought there was something between Francis, Jr., and me?" "I thought there had been before I came," he confessed. "We'd never been particularly close but he'd never resented me before. I couldn't keep from seeing that he was jealous. I know it must sound very foolish to you. But there was every reason why you should prefer a boy of your own age." "You must have known that I didn't. You could have told it from the way I acted." "I thought so until the night you brought him home. Then, everything seemed to go wrong." "Why were you so angry with me?"

"I couldn't understand why he should go to your house in that condition. Then when you said he resented our going together, and suggested that we break our engagement for dinner the next night..." "I supposed you wanted me to break it. You were having lunch with Mrs. Meade and you had told me you had something to tell me." "You had no idea, of course, as to what that might be?" Becky blushed. "I decided I must be wrong when I overheard your conversation with Mrs. Meade. I thought you must be preparing to tell me that she had come back because you realized your mistake." "Mistake about what?" "About not being in love with her," faltered Becky. "And now what do you think?" the man insisted. "I don't know what to think. I am so mixed up." "Look at me!" he commanded. As she gazed into the depths of his eyes she felt his power over her like a subtle enchantment. "Do you believe now that I am in love with Lelia Meade?" he demanded. "You've certainly been spending a lot of time with her." "For two reasons," he explained. "One being that I didn't think it mattered to you what I did, and the other because Lelia insisted if I stopped seeing her too suddenly I people would talk." "I told you when Lelia went to New York that I was through with love and never intended to be married but that was because I didn't understand myself. I love you, little Becky! Not as the boy I used to be, but as a man loves. With all my heart." As he spoke he drew her irresistibly into his arms. "Tell me that you love me, too," he whispered. There had always been a quality of magic about her relationship with him. Feeling herself part of a dream rather than a real person Becky answered, "I love you, Philip." (To Be Continued.) Copyright, Register and Tribune Syndicate.

Cranberries and Pumpkins Form Fitting Complements for Turkey

They Also Are Inspiration for Delectable Pies; Expert Gives Recipe for Pastry Made of Each Suitable for Thanksgiving Meal.

OUR PURITAN forebears did us a good turn when they gave the turkey-boon companions in the form of cranberries and pumpkins. These vegetables were also the inspiration for delectable pies. The cranberries were picked from dismal bogs by the intrepid pioneers and the pumpkins were located by hostile Indian camps for that first Thanksgiving dinner. Therefore these delicacies seem especially appropriate for stardom at our annual feast when we do honor to the initiative of these early pioneers and the bounty of the strange and they dared to settle.

Of course, cranberry jelly must be had for a complete Thanksgiving dinner with turkey and steamed pumpkin has a distinguished history as a vegetable but don't forget that tart cranberry pie and spicy pumpkin pie are all star endings for a feast and a special cause for Thanksgiving any time of the year. Modern versions of these celebrated pie delicacies would make the most pious Puritan's mouth water enviously.

Then, a question often debated is whether pumpkin or squash makes the best pie. There seem to be as definite opinions on this as there are on the best method to make mint julep. The texture of the pie is the same made with either pumpkin or squash, and the argument seems to be over the delicate flavor of the squash as against a more pronounced flavor of the pumpkin.

Many of us agree that both are fine, but neither is made often enough to please the man of the house and the construction really is not difficult, especially if you use canned squash or pumpkin. If you are in a hurry it is a joy not to have to struggle over peeling, stewing, and mashing either the pumpkin or squash before making the pie. No liquid is added to the canned product when using. The spices selected are usually the same for either kind of pie and the sweetening may be white sugar, little or two or more of them, depending on the whims of the cook. The milk may be bottle milk or evaporated milk. The eggs may be beaten slightly with yolk and whites together, or the whites may be beaten separately and folded into the custard mixture. The latter method makes a more fluffy pie. No matter what selection of ingredients is used, remember that a pie made with a modest amount of seasoning brings out more of the true flavor of the pumpkin or squash than when it is literally smothered with ginger or what not.

Magie Cranberry Pie.

1 1/2 cup (1 can) sweetened condensed milk
1/4 cup lemon juice
1 cup cranberry pulp, drained
2 egg yolks
Baked pie shell (9 inch)
Blend together sweetened condensed milk, lemon juice, cranberry pulp and egg yolks. Pour into the baked shell. This mixture may also be served with a meringue made of 2 egg whites, beaten stiff and sweetened with 2 tablespoons of granulated sugar, browned in moderate oven (350 F.) for 10 minutes.

Pumpkin Pie.

1 cup steamed, strained pumpkin
1/4 teaspoon salt
1/4 teaspoon ginger
1/4 teaspoon cloves
2 teaspoons cinnamon
3 eggs
1 1/2 cups (1 can) sweetened condensed milk
1 cup water
Thoroughly mix steamed, strained and mashed pumpkin, salt, ginger, cloves, cinnamon, eggs, sweetened condensed milk and water. Pour into unbaked pie crust. Bake in hot oven (450 F.) 10 minutes, then reduce temperature to moderate (350 F.) and bake about 35 minutes longer, or until the filling has set.

Holiday Cakes and Cookies

A TIME-SAVER for the busy housewife is to follow one simple foolproof recipe—and add a new exciting flavor each time. With practice you'll whip this like lightning!

Foundation Two-Egg Cake.
1/2 cup butter or other shortening
1 cup sugar
2 eggs
2 1/2 cups sifted cake flour
2 1/4 teaspoons baking powder
1/4 teaspoon salt
1/4 cup milk
1 teaspoon vanilla
Cream butter and sugar, add eggs well beaten; then dry ingredients alternately with milk and vanilla; beat until smooth.

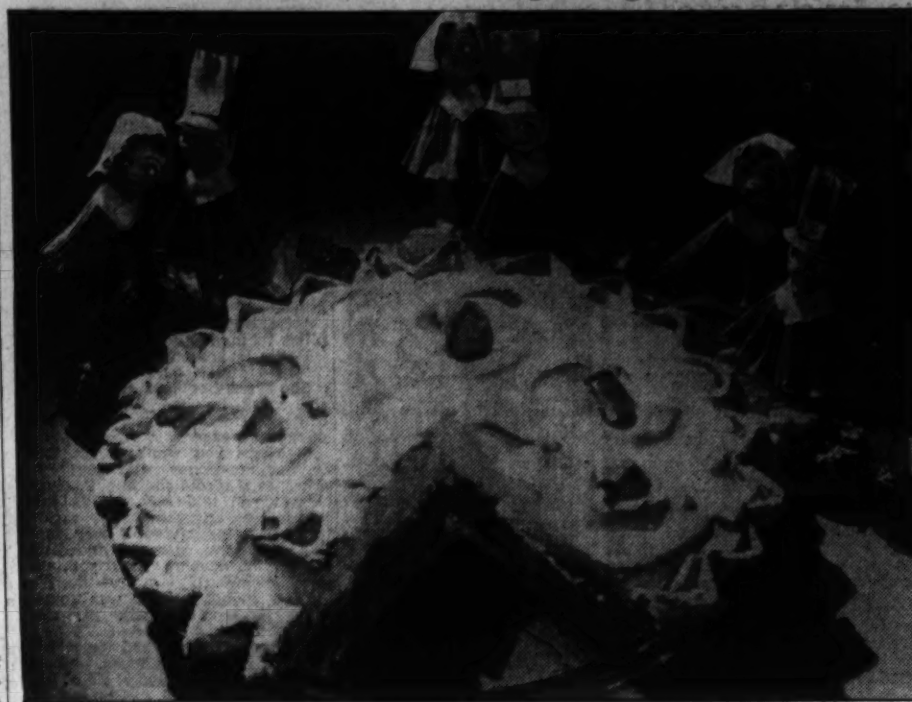

One time add a cup of walnuts or—yummy-yummy—hickory nuts; another time 2-3 cup raisins, lightly floured. For quick company cakes what is more appealing than the rich flavor of 2-3 cup candied pineapple or a scanty 2-3 cup of coconut? Or 2-3 cup candied rind—orange, lemon or citron—will give your cake new zest.

And think of all the delectable icings to give your quick-and-easy cakes a holiday spirit. The cakes pictured are flavored with orange rind and topped with luscious uncooked chocolate icing. Melt 2 1/4 squares unsweetened chocolate; add 1 tablespoon butter. Work part of 2 cups sifted confectioner's sugar in 1 egg white slightly beaten. Gradually add chocolate-butter mixture, remainder of sugar and 2 to 3 tablespoons of cream.

Our new 40-page booklet, "Cakes and Cookies," has 35 tasty icings and fillings to vary your holiday cakes. Loads of cake and cookie receipts to make you a popular hostess.

Send 15 cents for our booklet, "Cakes and Cookies," to The Washington Post, Home Institute, 109 West Nineteenth street, New York, N. Y. Write plainly your name and address and the name of booklet.

Pie Deserves Thanksgiving Tribute

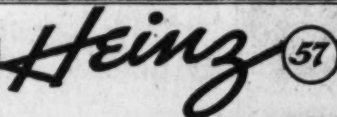

Pie is a star ending for a holiday feast and this cranberry pie would be a special reason for giving thanks for it is so easily made and a change from the usual cranberry sauce in the meal. The parade of Puritan dolls does fitting tribute to the delicacy that may be made with or without the fluffy meringue.

Swiss Steak Served With Gravy Ideal

Whether the Swiss steak itself or the rich brown gravy served with it is more popular with the men-folk, they are an ineluctable combination, enough to change any grouch to a grin.

The round of beef, cut at least 1 inch thick, is the usual choice for a Swiss steak, although there is no reason that a thick chuck steak could not be cooked by the same method with equally satisfactory results. Flour may be pounded into the steak if desired. Then it is browned in hot lard, a small amount of liquid added, the pan covered tightly and baked in a moderate oven (350 degrees F.) until done. It may be necessary to add more liquid, but if so, add only a small amount at a time, as this allows the meat to brown and makes the gravy even better.

ACCESSORIES TO THE FEAST

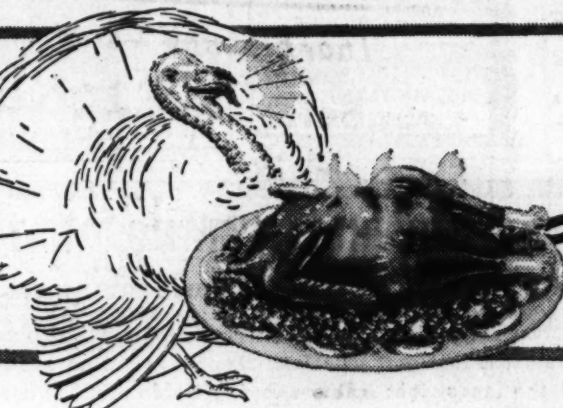

Our fixin's make the feast. Toothsome trimmings—as much as a part of the great American dinner scene as the turkey—are Heinz shimmering jellies (4 kinds); piquant pickled onions—matched like pearls; plump, selected olives and fresh cucumber pickle.

AH! GREEN AND GLORIOUS

After the turkey—and before the pie—you'll welcome the tantalizing freshness of a cool, green salad—to clear the taste. A simple salad, dressed with Heinz imported pure olive oil and Heinz vintage vinegar. (Four kinds: cider, tarragon, malt and white.)

END OF A PERFECT MEAL

Three lordly puddings for the grand finale! Heinz Plum Pudding—from a treasured recipe. Heinz Fig Pudding made from finest Smyrna figs and a steamed date pudding such as they used to serve at Thanksgiving in old Kentucky.

22 delicious ways TO START YOUR THANKSGIVING DINNER

Every feast needs an overture—a fitting prelude to induce the mood. Heinz soups are worthy of great occasions. Twenty-two delectables—old-home favorites. Step up, ladies—take your choice.

At the dinner traditional, Heinz Cream of Green Pea or Heinz Cream of Oyster—flavorous bisque of succulent bivalves. Remember how your grandmother made them—with country cream—thicker than most city folks have ever seen! That's our way of making cream soups—here at Heinz.

For the more formal Thanksgiving dinner you'll like Heinz Consommé—sparkling, amber essence of fine meats—or Heinz Genuine Turtle Soup. Don't gasp. Of course you can afford it. Heinz now offers this epicurean soup at no increase in the moderate Heinz prices.

CAPITAL MANNERS

By Margaret Wallace.

THANKSGIVING DAY problems of the Washington hostesses who entertain family and friends at luncheon or dinner are often vexing ones. Some hostesses with a score or more of relatives expected one of the most difficult of their problems by having buffet dinners and luncheons on Thanksgiving. This is a happy solution in this day of apartment house dining rooms.

When the Thanksgiving dinner or luncheon is a more formal one, the question of seating is of as much interest in many Washington homes as it is at state dinners at the White House.

One hostess has formed the habit of letting the guests draw lots for their places at the table so that grandfather and grandmother on the maternal side and grandmother or grandfather on the paternal side will not feel they have not been given proper honors. This hostess has the cards cut in the form of little turkeys with numbers on them to match the numbers on more or less turkey place cards on the tables. There are two sets of numbers so that men and women dining partners may be arranged.

Host at Top of Table.

This system, of course, would only be feasible for family parties. The host and hostess do not draw numbers. They always must maintain their places at the table, the host at the top and the hostess at the foot, or opposite to each other at the center of the table.

Family parties of well-bred people are conducted just as any other dinner or luncheon party. The guests are expected to be on time. They are expected to leave after luncheon unless the hostess has provided some special entertainment. The members of the family and intimate friends who sometimes arrive long before luncheon on Thanksgiving Day and remain all

Tart Salad Advised For Festive Dinner

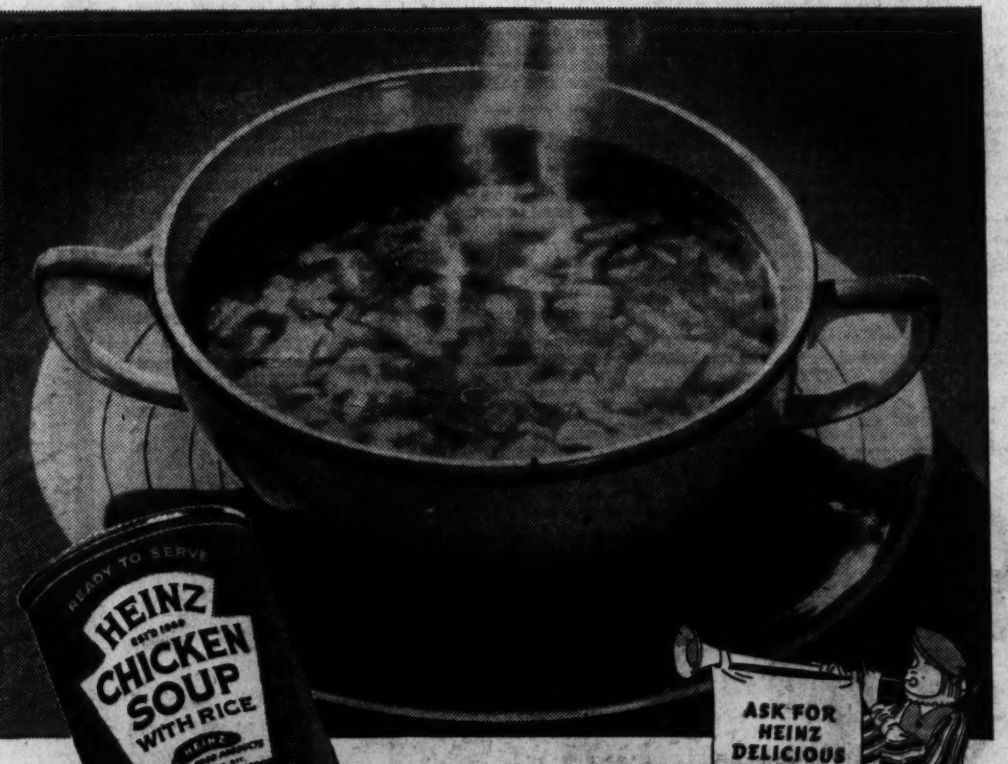

Endive With Grapefruit Will Counteract Acids.

When your dinner is a feast the salad should provide a contrast. No heavy salads when the meal is a big one, but something light, juicy and tart enough to "freshen your tongue." Most welcome is a simple mixture of endive, chicory or lettuce, and juicy grapefruit segments, with a bit of green pepper or pimento for contrast.

The grapefruit, of course, is alkaline in reaction, and just what is craved in the middle of a big meal. For a good French dressing for your simple "dinner salad," just combine some of the juice of the grapefruit (about 2 tablespoonful) with 8 tablespoonfuls mayonnaise, add 1-2 teaspoon paprika, 2-3 teaspoon salt, dash of pepper, and mix well. If you like, add a little onion juice or Worcestershire, horseradish or minced chives. For a golden dressing, mix the yolk of an egg with the dressing.

A Woman's NEW YORK

By Alice Hughes.

New York, Nov. 23.

WHENEVER I get low in my mind about the crazy doings of our zippy youngsters, and begin to wake up at 3 in the morning and ask myself whether or not I am drifting, I tiddle off and have a good talk with Margery Wilson.

La Wilson, you may know, is the one-time movie star who now makes an excellent living selling charm to the ladies of ALICE HUGHES. America. And she is so convinced, all signs to the contrary, that we are entering a new era of more gracious living that she could peddle the thought even to a glamor girl with a hangover.

Marge, if she doesn't mind, says that the jazz age is plenty good and dead. "Why, people are beginning to use the word 'elegant' seriously in place of 'swell,'" she tells me. "And they now invite friends to a 'reception' rather than a 'cocktail party.'" Miss Wilson takes great comfort from such thoughts, and it would be mean of me to hint that I don't remember ever hearing anyone use the word 'elegant' seriously in my lifetime.

However, Margery is sure that we are growing better and more elegant. She sees an end to the age-old practice of girls waiting for their sweetie-pies on street corners, and finds that the words "ladies" and "gentlemen" are no longer terms of reproach. So while she doesn't actually convince me of much, she does comfort me. However, I fear she goes head first off the deep end when she predicts that the fine old European custom of hand-kissing will become popular in America. No, Marge—it's simply agin the nature of our men-writers. A hand-kisser is a sissy, and you'll never convince Daddy to do the contrary!

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—I was proud to shake the hand of Helen Dryden at our recent Motor Display, for the talented Helen is the only woman of the year who had a hand in designing the interior of one of the new cars. Helen tells me that one of the keynotes of the 1937 horseless carriages is an almost complete absence of those annoying little gadgets that catch and trip our Sunday frocks. It is possible that the motor monarchs are beginning to pay us some mind?

There's one local girl who doesn't have to fret about creating a couple of dozen models for her new line of clothes—for she's made a small fortune with one style of dress. That's the able Grace Ashley, whose "shirt-stud model" has made good for her in such a big way that she's let well enough rest.

There's one unpretentious ex-speakeasy in town famous for its honest steaks and chops, and that's Frankie and Johnny's, two flights up at 45th street and Eighth avenue. Taking my little old gentleman in the car a few nights ago for a bowl of gruel, whom should I see tearing a porterhouse that tiny giant of the stage, Helen Hayes! Proving the little Washington wanderer is still a trouper who loves good vittles.

While my dentist was bearing down on the buzz saw the other day, he began speculating on just how much high-class dental work Shirley Temple must have right now, with her baby teeth dropping, no doubt, like priceless pearls. She shed her first one in the late spring of '35, and by now must have a terrific collection of temporary store gnashers.

At this hour the leading light among our high-class advertising women is Bernice Fitzgibbon, recently given the job of heading the ad department of one of the big and famous stores. Bernice it was who thought up the now-classic slogan, "It's Smart to Be Thrifty." "They say" that Fitz now raises in the neighborhood of $100 a day, which would not be buttons even in Hollywood. And at home she has two fine kids, Pete and Elizabeth. Some girl, this Miss Fitzgibbon! I used to work with her, and can testify.

My chuckle of the past week came when I heard that the very snooty membership of Long Island's Piping Rock Club, hearing that modest Dr. Allan Roy Dafeo was lurching in the place, gathered round to stare and ask questions for all the world like moonstruck movie fans. It was one of their Big Moments. Yet a dozen Whiteys wouldn't have caused an eyelid to flutter.

Fruit Centerpiece Depicts Good Harvest

A horn-of-plenty filled with richly colored fruits makes an ideal centerpiece for the Thanksgiving table. It is an original container and makes an appropriate background for the fruits. Let the luscious fruit overflow to represent an abundant fall harvest. This ornament is cleverly made by covering a wire frame with narrow ruffles of cellophane.

Attractive Centerpiece Needed To Complete Holiday Picture

Autumn Fruit of Rich Colors Ideal for Such Decorative Purpose on Thanksgiving Table—Care Suggested in Arrangement.

THE THANKSGIVING table must hold a roast turkey, cranberry sauce, pumpkin pies and other old standby "fixings" for a genuine holiday feast, but it must also have an attractive centerpiece to be complete. Autumn fruits, with their rich colors, make an ideal centerpiece for the Thanksgiving table, but the hostess who merely piles them into a dish hasn't given as much thought to their decorative possibilities as the fruits deserve.

An original container for these seasonable fruits, as a horn-of-plenty, permits an unusual arrangement of the fruit and an appropriate choice of background colors. A very effective horn may be made with amber and tango cellophane cellulose film, applied in narrow ruffles over a wire frame. The two colors are in alternate rows and the top curve of the horn is trimmed with a streaming bow of gold-edged brown ribbon of the firm, combined with plain gold. Let the fruit overflow on the table, to represent an abundant fall harvest.

Horn of Plenty.

The materials required to make this horn-of-plenty are two large household rolls of film (one amber and one tango); six No. 15 wires; one fold of white crepe paper; three yards of brown and gold transparent ribbon; two yards of gold ribbon of the same type; one spool wire, and one tube of glue.

To form the frame, make four circles with the following wire lengths: 24-inch, 22½-inch, 17-inch and 11-inch, each lapped two inches evenly. Fasten on the 19-inch wire first, then the side and bottom wires, forming them into horn shape. Wind the ends of the five wires together with spool wire along a 5-inch space and add the hoops, evenly spaced, to hold the shape of the horn. To support the frame on the table, cut a 20-inch wire and bend in the middle. Apply the ends to the 25½-inch wires where they meet the largest hoop, and wire together with spool wire for a 5-inch space. The center band makes a point that extends under the horn, forming a stand. Wind all wires with a half-inch strip of white crepe paper.

Amber Cellophane.

For the covering, crush amber cellophane with the hands and spread it over the outside of the frame.

Turkey Purchaser Warned to Watch Age Characteristics

In buying your Thanksgiving fowl, there are special features about it you should be particular to observe. These birds are raised on great farms to provide a sure supply for all, and of just the right age. The tuckers and chickens are sold in thousands to the packers, who feed them just right before dressing them.

Look for the general marks of smooth bright feet, clear smooth skin, plump flesh and a pliable breast bone if you want to be sure of a young bird.

In turkeys a hen that weighs much more than 10 to 12 pounds is apt to be old, but a tom turkey may weigh as much as 15 to 18 pounds and be very young and desirable. Hens are a bit more compact of structure. Capons may weigh up to 9 or 10 pounds and be delicious eating. They are fatter than roasting hens. For a small family a roasting chicken of 4 or 5 pounds may be choice. Allow one pound per person in any purchase.

Turkey Fricassee Offers Variety

Turkey parts made by cutting the turkey up as for a fricassee or stew offer interesting variety in turkey meat. The meaty portions—breast, legs and thighs—are roasted. Because of the size of these "baby" turkey roasts, the searing method for cooking should be used, to assure a satisfactory brown by the time the meat is done. Boning these

"cuts" and placing a dressing inside or directly underneath the skin give an attractive meat. The bony, less meaty portions—back, necks and wings—are simmered in a very small or medium quantity of water. This moist heat cooking may be combined with a broiling process. These portions of the turkey have too many choice morsels to relegate them to the soup pot. An interesting variety of dishes is possible.

Turkey Raribit With Poached Eggs:
1 tablespoon fat
1 tablespoon flour
1 cup milk

2 tablespoons grated cheese
¼ teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon chopped parsley
1 cup chopped turkey meat
4 poached eggs
4 toasted soft rolls or rounds of bread

may be reserved for sprinkling over the top of the sauce and then melted to a brown stage in a hot oven or under broiler.

Suitable for Broiling.
The cuts suitable for broiling are the tender steaks and chops. Porterhouse or T-bone, club and sirloin are the steaks; rib, loin or shoulder chops and slices cut from the leg are the lamb cuts suitable for broiling. Ground meat from even the less tender cuts may be broiled, since in the grinding, the long fibers are cut, and the meat made tender.

New Holiday Menus Made To Suit All

Dinner Recommended for Families That Must Economize.

Most Homes Will Dine on the Traditional Turkey Repast.

By The Post's Food Editor.

WE ALL LOVE Thanksgiving for the pleasure of inviting guests or of being the invited guest, the anticipation of seeing home folks and friends again, and the joy of having a part in the holiday enthusiasm. We like the day itself because of the spicy, tantalizing odors of the kitchen and the peaceful, relaxed feeling that comes when we sit down to share the Thanksgiving feast.

Some Thanksgiving dinners and their settings have become as modern and varied as the new streamlined train, but most of America still votes for the old-fashioned family feast of the tradition-hallowed harvest table.

Most families start to talk of Thanksgiving weeks ahead and all sorts of plans are made about the menu. Your family may feel that the time-honored menu, handed down for generations, with little or no change, containing turkey and mince pie, is as usual, good enough for this year, but though we do not forget the star-baby, a few new touches make this dinner all the more inviting. An acacia pear and orange salad and brussels sprouts in celery sauce are modern additions.

Not all families will want turkey. Some will ask for a change, while others will prefer a less expensive but no less festive, main dish. Because of these varied tastes, we furnish menus for various budgets and to please even the most epicurean member of your family.

Grandmother did not stint on her foods or her energy. Several kinds of meat and fowl were flanked by six to ten vegetables. Jellies, preserves, spiced fruits and relishes vied in numbers and deliciousness and the desserts came in savory squadrons.

From this storehouse of food material, several typical menus could be selected for the harvest table, with its setting of autumn foliage, pine cones and winter berries.

COOKING HINTS

Salt sprinkled with garlic juice adds a distinctive flavor to roast lamb.

Two or three slices of bacon placed on top of a liver loaf during baking adds both flavor and fat.

Veal baked in sour cream makes a delicious meat dish. The veal is first browned in hot oil, then the soup cream is added and the meat baked in a moderate oven (350 degrees Fahrenheit) until done.

Lamb—Either roast or stewed, is improved by a teaspoon of crushed marjoram.

Baked Beans—Home made or out of the can have greater flavor if heated with six whole cloves.

How to Preserve a Husband

Be careful in your selection. Do not choose too young; take only such varieties as have been reared in a good moral atmosphere. When once decided upon and selected, let that part remain forever settled and give your entire thought to preparation for domestic use.

Some insist on keeping them in a pickle, while others are constantly getting them into hot water. Even poor varieties may be made sweet, tender and good by garnishing them with patience, well sweetened with smiles and flavored with kisses. Then wrap in a mantle of domestic devotion and serve with peaches and cream. When thus prepared, they will keep for years.

Select Recipe Presented For Stuffing of Turkey

Suggestions for Chicken and Goose Trimmings Included in Cooking Hints Prepared for Housewives on Thanksgiving.

By Rebekah Blake.

THANKSGIVING and turkey mean almost the same thing, so closely have they been linked in American tradition. A murmur of Thanksgiving must have followed the roar of the first New England blunderbuss to fell the ungainly turkey, and then and there the Pilgrim marksman must have turned his thoughts to a suitable and near-at-hand stuffing.

In many homes, the stuffing is considered only a little less important than the meat itself for the holiday dinner, because there is so much sentiment connected with its choice for this occasion.

A New Englander, without doubt would choose a moist but not soggy bread dressing with plenty of minced onion and poultry seasoning for flavor. An Englishman would require sage for seasoning, and plenty of it. A Southerner would insist that rice, rather than bread, should form the basis of the stuffing. Perhaps it was the good Priscilla who hit upon oysters as the most tasty stuffing for the bird. Whichever it may be, there must be stuffing for the fowl, so we present several varieties to suit the tastes of the most particular home-makers.

Dressing Is Moist.

A good dressing has a pleasing, moist quality, yet it may be crumbly or hold its shape when served on the plate. It should be well flavored and yet somewhat bland. No one flavor should predominate so that the delicate poultry flavor is not depressed.

Texture is important for appearance on the plate, for flavor, and for satisfactory service. The method of mixing, the method of filling the bird, the preparation of the basic ingredient and the moistness of the cavity—all affect the texture. As dressing expands during the cooking space should be left so that the dressing does not emerge in service as a firm, soggy mass.

Standard Dressing.

(For a 12 to 16-pound bird.)
1½ pound loaf bread, stale.
½ to 1 pound butter.
1 teaspoon salt.
¼ teaspoon white pepper.
¼ cup minced onion.
Remove crusts, cut bread into 1 inch cubes, and drop into a large mixing bowl. Cut butter into dice, about ¼ inch. Toss all ingredients together using 2 forks or hands.

Wild Rice and Chestnuts.

(For about a 4-pound chicken.)
1 cup wild rice.
½ pound chestnuts blanched and cooked until tender.
2 tablespoons minced onion.
½ cup butter, melted.
¼ teaspoon salt.
¼ teaspoon white pepper.
Wash rice thoroughly and steam using 3 cups of water and 1 teaspoon salt, about 40 minutes. Combine all ingredients by tossing lightly.

Savory Oyster Stuffing.

(For 12-pound fowl.)
1 pint small oysters.
½ cup butter.
¼ cup strained oyster liquid.
8 cups soft bread, crumbled.
2 tablespoons minced parsley.
2 tablespoons minced celery.
2 tablespoons chopped green peppers.
1 teaspoon salt.
¼ teaspoon paprika.
1 teaspoon poultry seasoning.
1-3 cup chopped salt pork.
½ cup hot cream.
Melt pork in frying pan, add and brown parsley and celery. Add rest of ingredients and simmer 5 minutes, stirring with fork. Lightly stuff the fowl.

PLEASANT HOMES

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin.

"WHOEVER placed the wall brackets in my living room certainly had a taste for glory," Eleanor indignantly. "There's one right square in the middle of each wall space which makes it impossible to hang pictures gracefully and it's awkward for the furniture too. What would you do about them? I would so much rather light the room with lamps."

Of course when a lady has dollars and dollars to spend, the solution of this problem would be as easy as falling off a log—it's just a little matter of taking out the brackets and having the wall where they were replastered or repaired. But when a lady has to count her pennies, the thing to do is to have the fixtures taken down, then hang pictures or interesting wall hangings over the raw spots. In Eleanor's living room, this could be worked out nicely by hanging framed needlepoint pieces of flower subjects over the bad places where the fixtures were. Eleanor is a great hand at needlepoint and has done some beautiful pieces that she's going to have framed in old gold frames for the wall. They will be lovely against the dusty pink walls and with the dull blue-green of the rug, the deep ivory and browns and old rose of the furniture coverings. For her living room has taken its colors from a favorite chair seat that she worked in needlepoint in colors mellowed and rich. It is not a pretentious room at all but it has that most illustrious quality of all—charm—which often comes with furniture that's a little shabby in a room where lots of loving pains have been put into making a home out of it.

Send a stamped self addressed envelope for Miss Boykin's bulletin, "See Yourself a Family History." This is a five-page bulletin that includes patterns you can follow for needlepoint with personal significance for you.

Lemon juice sprinkled over peeled bananas will keep them from turning dark.

To take the shine from clothing, sponge the places with hot vinegar rubbing vigorously, then press as usual.

Lamb Roasts Desirable.

Housewives who have but two in the family frequently yearn for good, juicy roasts like mother used to prepare, and because the family is small hesitate to choose a large roast. This is where a lamb proves to be a most accommodating animal. Since a lamb is small, it yields choice roasts which are small in size.

Applesauce is considered the best accompaniment for roast pork, but have you tried a combination of applesauce and cranberries? While cranberries are plentiful, try this combination. It is delicious.

Modern ESTATE GAS RANGE

On Thanksgiving Day... when the burden on the cook is greatest... you'll appreciate one of these Modern Estate Gas Ranges in your kitchen. They actually make cooking easy! Oven heat control, for instance, makes baking failures almost impossible, eliminates oven watching and saves countless hours in the kitchen. The new high-speed grill seals goodness in meats and broils in about half the time. Improved top burners (automatically lighted!) give utmost speed and the exact shade of heat you need.

The Estate Gas Range of today has many other startling improvements, too, which will make the Thanksgiving dinner and every other meal a real pleasure to prepare! See the new Estates at our showrooms today... while special Fall sale prices are still in effect.

There's nothing like GAS for...

FRYING
Perfect, speedy frying requires instant high heat—even spread of heat—under the skillet—numbless heat variations. Gas gives them all!

ROASTING
Gas gives you the even ventilation which produces crisp, juicy roasts. Excess moisture is allowed to escape, important to accomplish this result.

BAKING
Successful baking results require an unlimited range of oven temperatures evenly distributed. That's why Gas assures light, evenly browned cakes, pies and breads.

BROILING
Gas gives you the intense heat needed to brown meats so fast that loss of juices is prevented. Full flavor is saved.

BOILING
Faster! Gas brings foods to a boil in 2/3 or less the time of other fuels. Because it is more flexible, it gives you the exact degrees of heat you need.

Fine Variety Of Desserts Is Advisable

Cake Will Be Especially Welcome to Diner on Thanksgiving.

Recipes Suggested for Course to Top Off Festive Meal.

OF COURSE you are having a fine old-fashioned Thanksgiving dinner and inviting all of the family, and that will call for a large quantity of food and a good variety of every member of the family will have his likes and dislikes and this is especially true with desserts.

You will naturally have pie. Thanksgiving dinner would not be complete without mince, pumpkin or cranberry pie or even all three of them, but cake will be a delight to the guest with the sweet tooth. It is a change for the end of a heavy and festive meal.

After a bountiful dinner, you probably think that you will need to have another meal that day, not after several hours have passed you will be considering an evening snack. Supper after the holiday dinner is also an appropriate time to serve cake and if you serve only one with the noon meal, a fresh coconut layer cake or gold cake will be a welcome surprise.

And what could be nicer or more appropriate than a hickory-nut cake. This will even appeal to the man who always says "I hate cake." Here is a recipe for a fresh coconut cake that has all the old-fashioned goodness—even to coconut in the creamy unfrosted frosting.

Coconut Cake.

1 cup butter
1 cup sugar
1 1/2 cups cake flour
1 teaspoon baking powder
1/2 teaspoon salt
1/4 cup irradiated evaporated milk

1/4 cup coconut milk, mixed
1/2 cup egg whites
1/2 teaspoon vanilla
Cream the butter. Add sugar and cream until sugar granules are dissolved. Sift flour, then measure, beat with baking powder and salt. Add flour and diluted milk alternately to the butter-sugar mixture, beginning and ending with flour. Fold in the stiffly beaten egg whites and add vanilla. Bake in a moderate oven (350 F.) 25 minutes. Yield: Two 8-inch layers.

Coconut Frosting.

1 pound confectioner's sugar
3 tablespoons irradiated evaporated milk
1 cup grated coconut
1/2 teaspoon vanilla
Mix ingredients thoroughly and add until creamy. Yield: Sufficient for cake.

Economical Gold Cake.

1 cup sifted cake flour
1 teaspoon double-acting baking powder
1/2 cup butter or other shortening
1 cup sugar
3 egg yolks, beaten until thick
1 lemon colored
1/4 cup milk
1 teaspoon vanilla or 1/2 teaspoon orange extract
Sift flour once, measure, add baking powder, and sift together three times. Cream butter thoroughly, add sugar gradually, and cream together until light and fluffy. Add yolks and beat well. Add flour alternately with milk, a small amount at a time, beating after each addition until smooth. Add flavoring and beat thoroughly. Bake in greased pan, 8 by 8 by 2 inches, in moderate oven (350 F.) 50 minutes, or until done. Spread Seven Minute Frosting generously on top and sides of cake. Double the recipe for two layer cakes.

Seven Minute Frosting.

2 egg whites, unbeaten
1 1/2 cups sugar
1/2 cup water
1/2 cup light corn sirup
1/2 cup vanilla
Combine egg whites, sugar, water and corn sirup in top of double boiler, beating with rotary egg beater until thoroughly mixed. Place over rapidly boiling water, beat constantly with rotary egg beater, and cook seven minutes, or until frosting will stand in peaks. Remove from boiling water; add vanilla and beat until thick enough to spread. Makes enough frosting to cover top and sides of 8 by 8 by 2-inch cake generously.

Hickory Nut Cake.

1 1/2 cups sugar
1/2 cup butter
1 cup hickory nut meats
1/2 cup sweet milk
(Other nuts may be used)
2 1/2 cups flour after sifting once
1 level teaspoon soda
1 rounding teaspoon cream tartar
4 egg whites beaten stiff
Flavor with vanilla.
Cream butter and sugar, then add milk and flour, soda and cream tartar, add nut meats which have been dusted with flour, then lastly add the beaten whites of eggs. Bake in layers.

Devil's Food Cake.

(One sheet, 8 to 9 inches or two layers)
1 1/2 cups cake flour
1/2 teaspoon salt
1 1/2 teaspoons baking powder
2 squares (2 oz.) chocolate
1/2 cup water
1/2 teaspoon soda
1/4 cup butter or other fat
1 cup sugar
2 eggs
1 teaspoon vanilla
1/4 cup sour milk
Sift the flour, salt, and baking powder. Put the chocolate and water in a saucepan; stir over low heat until smooth and thick; remove from the stove; add the soda. Cream the butter; add 1/2 cup sugar gradually. Beat the eggs; beat in the remainder of the sugar; melted chocolate mixture; add the vanilla. Stir in the flour alternately with the sour milk. Beat for 1 minute; bake 350 to 375 F. for 30 to 40 minutes for sheet cake and 20 to 30 minutes for layer cakes.

Different Dessert For Holiday Feast

A Devil's Food cake (left), is a treat for the guest with the sweet tooth. He will welcome it after a heavy meal or with the holiday evening snack.

An old-fashioned Thanksgiving dinner calls for cake as well as pie when it is time for dessert. This gold cake (above) is easily made and a sure success.

Today's HEALTH TALK

By Dr. Irving S. Cutler.

What Causes Delirium?

Almost everyone has had some experience with delirium, not necessarily the type that follows the excessive use of alcohol, but that which comes about because the blood has absorbed the products of disease.

The word really means "off the track," and signifies a state of mind in which ideas are mixed, sometimes simulating hallucinations or delusions. As a rule, the patient does not possess a normal sense of space, time, or location. He may present a picture of wild terror, in the belief that he is pursued by enemies from whom he must escape.

Thus we account for the occasional pneumonia sufferer, deeply toxified by the result of the disease, who may elude his attendants and plunge from a hospital window.

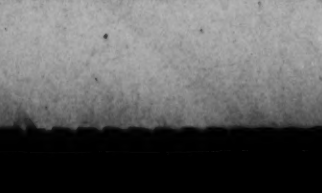

Proportionate to Temperature. Each of us at some time or other probably has been ill enough to develop the symptom. In the old days when typhoid fever was common we expected every patient to display mental irresponsibility for three or four days, and generally we were not disappointed. In the great majority of instances the difficulty is due to some toxin which has poisoned the brain.

As a rule, in diseases such as typhoid fever, measles and scarlet fever, the mental confusion is in proportion to the temperature. A patient may envision a frightful scene or hold an animated conversation with an invisible being as long as the fever remains, for example, above 104 degrees Fahrenheit. If by sponging or other means it can be brought down two or three points the symptoms will disappear with clear, rational response. In pneumonia there is likely to be a certain amount of foggy thinking from the very outset, regardless of the heat of the body, and it is particularly noticeable in those who have been accustomed to the use of alcohol.

Sometimes uremia (failure of the kidney function) is ushered in by an exhibition of irresponsible ideas, and the afflicted one may make positive statements that cannot be borne out by facts. This state of affairs may be succeeded by unconsciousness and convulsions with a fatal issue. The pupils are contracted and immovable.

Dangerous Symptom. No person laboring under delirium of any type should be allowed to remain in a room alone. Each year a number of ill persons will leap from hotel windows or hospital rooms, many under a temporary mental aberration. The act is not a willful one looking toward self-destruction, but the result of a distorted sense of the situation, the mind filled with fear of dangers unseen.

Veal Dish Wins In Mushroom Recipe Contest

Staunton Woman Victor; Sukiyaki, Sweetbread, Roe Also Honored.

IT'S SURPRISING what savory dishes the versatile mushroom can make. It blends in so well with many different meats and vegetables and may be enjoyed when served garnished only with sauce, as an appetizer.

For this week's mushroom contest, Mrs. J. R. McAllister, of 402 Osage place, Staunton, Va., wins the first prize of $3 for her recipe for veal loaf with mushrooms.

The second prize of $2 was awarded to Evelyn Wesbacker, 4423 Eighth street northwest, for her recipe for Japanese Sukiyaki. Mrs. D. A. Jordan, 158 West End boulevard, Winston-Salem, N. C., won third prize of $1 for her recipe for mushrooms and sweetbreads in noodle ring. Miss N. Milliken, Box 1182, Bradley boulevard, Bethesda, Md., won the fourth prize of $1 for her recipe for bridge party mushrooms, and Mrs. Susan Bennett, of 808 North Bentall street, Baltimore, Md., was awarded the fifth prize, $1, for her recipe for mushroom stuffed fish roe.

Here is Mrs. McAllister's recipe:

Veal Loaf with Mushrooms.

Select veal with knuckle bone. Cook two pounds of veal in 3 inches of water in a vessel for 1 1/2 hours. Remove, cool and grind. Add 1 can of mushrooms, chopped. 1 green pepper, a small chopped onion, and the liquid. Stir all together. Place in mold lined with hard-boiled eggs. Let cool to form a loaf. Garnish with parsley. Evelyn Wesbacker's recipe:

Sukiyaki.

(Japanese favorite)
2 pounds meat (pork, beef or chicken, sliced thin)
2 medium onions, sliced thin, or 3 green onions, tops and all, cut fine
1 can mushrooms
1 small can bamboo sprouts
1/2 cup diluted soy sauce
2 tablespoons sugar
1 cake soy bean curd
1/4 cup cooking oil
1/2 cup hot, boiled rice for each serving

Steam everything but the rice together until tender.

Here is Mrs. Jordan's recipe:

Mushrooms and Sweetbreads in Noodle Ring.

1 cup cream (canned cream may be used)
2 tablespoons butter
2 tablespoons flour
2 beaten egg yolks
1/2 teaspoon salt
1/2 teaspoon pepper
Melt butter in sauce pan. Remove from fire and blend with flour. Add the cream gradually and cook until it thickens. Pour a few spoonfuls of this mixture over the beaten egg yolks, stirring constantly. Then stir the egg slowly into the sauce. Add the following ingredients:
1 cup boiled sweetbreads (quartered)
1 pimento cut in strips
1 green pepper, diced
Four this mixture immediately into baked noodle ring and serve at once.

Needle Ring.

3 cups boiled noodles
1/2 cup cream
3 eggs, beaten
1 tablespoon butter
Salt
Pepper
Cook 1-3 to 1-2 pound of fine or broad noodles in boiling salted water. Place in colander and pour cold water over them, and let drain thoroughly. Add salt and pepper to eggs and stir in the melted butter, and lastly the cream. Butter a medium-sized ring mold well and add the boiled noodles. Pour over the custard. Set in a pan of boiling water and place in a moderate oven and bake 30 to 45 minutes without browning. The ring is set if a knife put into it comes out clean. When ready to serve loosen edges with knife. Turn out on a hot platter and fill center with mushrooms and and sweetbread mixture. Garnish with strips of pimento and sprigs of parsley.

Steamed Rice Comes in Handy For Leftovers After Holiday

Combines Well With Fish, Meat or Fowl and Can Be Served With Sauce, Gravy, in Casserole Dish, Stew or Soup.

After the calm, the storm. And after the feast—the leftovers! Holiday feasts, guest dinners, Sunday specials, party meals, almost always leave in their merry wake a trail of leftovers. Reclaiming the glories of the feast is beneath the dignity of any mother's daughter. It's best to change form and flavor, to transform, so that the leftover emerges as a reincarnation in some delicious form.

In using up the leftovers, you'll find no better aid and ally than rice. It will stretch the flavor and extend the amount of the least little bit of food; it may itself be reheated without the slightest loss in taste or texture, and it's so inexpensive that it keeps the cost down—which is the original idea in using leftovers, after all. Rice combines with fish, meat, fowl, vegetables, can be served with sauce, gravy, in a casserole dish, stew, or soup. So "steam up" plenty of rice to serve with the main course of the feast, and use it again to make meat-remnants into real bargains of the "yard-wide" variety.

Stuffed Turnip Cups.
1 cup cooked rice
1 cup cold lamb (or other leftover meat)

1 tablespoon minced parsley
8 turnips
1 tablespoon butter
1 small minced onion
1/2 teaspoon curry powder
Salt and pepper

Pare turnips, cut slices from top and scoop out inside, leaving rim 1/4 inch. Cook both shells and cover, 15 minutes in boiling water. Arrange in baking pan, fill with mixed meat, rice and seasoning; cover with tops, fastening each with toothpick. Pour around them water in which turnips were cooked; bake until tender. Pour off liquid and brown lightly. Serve.

Green peppers, large onions, firm tomatoes or large carrots may be used as cup to hold mixture of rice, meat or fish and sauce. Peppers should be hollowed out and par-boiled; onions and carrots should be cooked whole—then hollowed in cup shape. Tomatoes need no preliminary cooking. Season all vegetable cups well before stuffing. Cover with buttered crumbs or grated cheese. You may mix leftover cooked vegetables with rice and fry for a delicious hash.

Party Given To Marlers By Mahoneys

Lindsays Among Notable Guests of Reception to Canadians.

Counselor of Dominion Staff Is Host at Smart Function.

By Jessie Ash Arndt.

A week crowded with social functions began most pleasantly yesterday afternoon with the reception given by the Counselor of the Canadian Legation and Mrs. Merchant Mahoney, honoring the new Minister of Canada, Sir Herbert and Lady Marler.

The Ambassador of Great Britain and Lady Lindsay, with most of the members of the staff of the British Embassy, were there as were the Minister of the Union of South Africa and Mrs. Ralph William Close, and Dr. Robert Webster, new secretary of the Legation, and the Secretary of the Legation of the Irish Free State and Mrs. Robert Brennan, with their daughter, Miss Emer Brennan.

Lady Marler, who is being welcomed as another gracious diplomatic hostess, received with Mrs. Mahoney in a gown of powder blue lace made with an Elizabethan collar, with which she wore a becoming hat of matching blue felt, with a small brim. Mrs. Mahoney was gowned in coronation blue velvet and wore a corsage of gardenias.

Lady Lindsay was in a brown suit and matching hat, and Mrs. Close wore a black gown with ecru lace down the front of the blouse, and a black hat. Sir Ronald Lindsay and Gen. Peyton March were engaged in conversation while Mrs. March, in a black frock and black hat with an aigrette, took her turn at the tea table.

Before her, Mrs. F. C. Bradley, wife of the Naval Attaché of the British Embassy, in a brown costume, and Mme. Sable, wife of the Naval Attaché of the French Embassy, had poured. Mme. Sable wore black, with a black bird of paradise arching over the crown of her velvet hat.

Miss Willis Magee, who came to the Capital with Sir Herbert and Lady Marler and is a member of the Legation staff, is another who will be a welcome member of Washington society this winter. She wore a frock of green velvet, with a small black hat over her brown hair. Other young members of the Legation there were Mr. Ronald Macdonell, the Third Secretary, and Mrs. Macdonell, the French Embassy, had poured. Mme. Sable wore black, with a black bird of paradise arching over the crown of her velvet hat.

Mme. Salto, wife of the Ambassador of Japan, the country to which Sir Herbert was Canadian envoy before coming here, was present at the reception, as were the Ambassador of Cuba, Senor Dr. Guillermo Patterson, the Minister of Guatemala and Senor de Rejones, the Minister of Norway and Mme. Munthe de Mogensberg, and the Counselor of the Polish Embassy, Mr. Witold Wankowicz; Brig. Gen. and Mrs. Dion Williams, the Counselor of the British Embassy and Mrs. V. A. Mallet, and Mrs. James Carroll Frazer.

Mr. and Mrs. Walter R. Tucker, and Mrs. Tucker's sister, Countess de Castellane, who has just come from France and is her guest, were accompanied by Prince and Princess Sapieha, of Poland, and Baroness Bornemann, of Hungary, who are in the Capital for a few days after visiting Mrs. Thomas Davis at The Plains, Va.

Reception to Honor Italian Ambassador

The Italy-America Society will entertain at the Mayflower tomorrow afternoon at 5 o'clock in honor of the new Ambassador of Italy and Donna Matilde Suvich. The reception will be the first large function given for them since their arrival in Washington.

Col. Edgar Erskine Hume, who is chairman of the executive committee of the society, has named to assist him Mrs. Henry Heath, Mrs. James D. Lynch, Mrs. Edward A. Harriman, Miss Alys Downing, Col. Robert Fletcher, Col. John Hains, Col. Mervyn C. Buckley and Mr. Fortunato Porotto.

Review Postponed.

The book review which was to have been given this afternoon by Mrs. Lyman Swormstedt at the League of Republican Women has been postponed until December 9, when it will take place at 3:30 o'clock.

Candlelight Concert Staged At Phillips Memorial Gallery

MRS. FRANCIS WHITTEN, arrives at the Gallery to attend Candlelight Concert.

Mrs. Jouett Shouse Serves as Ticket-Taker at Performance By Pro Musica Quartet, With Arthur Granick Assisting in Quintet.

An atmosphere of soft light and fine paintings must be conducive to good "audience manners," for you could have heard a pin drop throughout the entire Candlelight Concert given yesterday afternoon.

Arthur Granick was assisting artist with the Pro Musica Quartet which plays on occasional Monday afternoons at the Phillips Memorial Gallery. Originally started at the home of Mrs. Jouett Shouse, the concert soon grew so popular they were transferred to their present surroundings.

Mrs. Shouse served as ticket-taker for part of the time yesterday, looking smart as well as business-like in a black frock and a felt hat trimmed with a cascade of black feathers. Mrs. Herbert Feis, also in black, assisted in ushering and saw to it that the many who arrived were seated comfortably.

Others present included Mrs. Hugh D. Auchincloss, wearing a mink coat over her lace-trimmed black frock; Mrs. Francis Whitten, Mrs. Charles Darlington, Frau Scholz, of the German Embassy; Mr. Henry LaFarge, Mrs. William K. Ryan, Mrs. Clarence Norton Goodwin, in a brown tweed suit with matching hat, and Mrs. Robert Whitney Imprie, also in tweeds.

Columbia Hospital Benefit Arranged

Young Maruchess, famous viola and viola d'amore concert artist, will be presented by Concerts Intimes, Elena de Sayn, director, at the Textile Museum, 2330 S street, in a benefit program December 3, at 8:30 o'clock. Part of the proceeds will go to Columbia Hospital for Women.

Mme. Maruchess, a favorite in Washington, has been heard here with the Friends of Music, the Coolidge Festival and the Friday Morning Music Club at a special concert with Mrs. Walter Bruce Howe, noted composer and sponsor of the National Symphony Orchestra.

Mme. Maruchess will introduce novel compositions for viola d'amore, a rare string instrument, bowed like the violin, but having seven strings instead of four, and seven sympathetic strings which vibrate under the fingerboard.

The list of patrons and patronesses includes Mr. and Mrs. Leander McCormick-Goodhue, Mr. and Mrs. George Hewitt Myers, Miss Bessie Kibbey and many other prominent music lovers.

Capital Girl, Naval Officer Married Here

Large Reception Is Held at the Army and Navy Country Club.

The wedding of Miss Lucile Elizabeth McGehee, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William N. McGehee, and Lieut. Dabney Waters, Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Dabney Waters, of Manassas, Va., took place yesterday afternoon at 4 o'clock in St. Alban's Episcopal Church, with the Rev. Charles T. Warner officiating.

White chrysanthemums and white tapers were arranged against a background of ferns and palms. The bride, who entered the church on the arm of her father, wore a gown of ivory satin made on bouffant lines with a circular train. Her veil fell from a Mary Stuart cap of tulle outlined in orange blossoms and she carried a bouquet of gardenias and lilies of the valley.

Her sister, Mrs. James Lemon, as the matron of honor, wore a gown of cinnabar velvet fashioned on empire lines, a twisted band turban of the same material, and carried yellow roses.

Miss Helen Bell, of Atlanta, Ga., her cousin, was maid of honor. She wore a gown of chartreuse velvet and a wreath of yellow roses in her hair and carried a bouquet of yellow roses.

The bridesmaids were Miss Nancy Waters, Miss Vivian Reed, Miss Betty Crane, Mrs. Joseph Flournoy, Miss Mary Katherine Perry and Mrs. Edward Sullivan. They wore gowns of sea green velvet designed with short full sleeves and voluminous skirts and carried bouquets of tallianum roses.

Lieut. Samuel Pemberton Moncre acted as best man. The ushers were Lieut. E. S. Pearce, Lieut. Comdr. J. Conover, Lieut. J. W. Leverton, Jr., Lieut. J. M. Mustin, Lieut. J. C. Wylie and Lieut. W. C. R. Roberts.

Following the ceremony there was a large reception at the Army and Navy Country Club. The bride and bridegroom, with their parents, received on the sun porch. Mrs. McGehee wore an imported gown of gold lace, with a brown velvet turban and a corsage of gardenias. Mrs. Waters had on a gown of Dubonnet velvet made on empire lines and a small close-fitting hat of the same shade.

After a wedding trip Lieut. Waters and his bride will make their home at the Northshore Apartments, Norfolk, Va.

THE MERRY WHIRL by MARYLYN

And now, Joseph E. Davies is all sworn in as our Ambassador to the land of the Soviets. This solemn little ceremony took place yesterday morning promptly at 11:30 o'clock in Secretary Hull's office with the Acting Secretary, R. Walton Moore, officiating.

Picture-still, the gathering stood silent and interested until the last word, then quick as a wink, before anyone else had time to take another breath or turn to speak to a neighbor, Mrs. Davies rushed forward and bestowed a kiss upon her newly envied husband before they were almost swallowed up by the ring of eager well-wishers. Mrs. Davies had on a stunning outfit of beige wool crepe and black satin, with which she wore a toque of black and beige feathers.

Others of the Davies clan present were Emilen Knight Davies, who is home from Vassar for the holidays, and her sister, Mrs. Mil-

Dr. Ivan Franges, Miss Corby Wed In Capital Dec. 7

An engagement of interest to Capital society is that announced yesterday by Mrs. William S. Corby, of her daughter, Miss Justine Corby, to Dr. Ivan Franges, First Secretary of the Yugoslavian Legation.

Miss Corby has selected December 7 for the wedding, to take place at her home. Dr. Franges and his bride will sail on December 9 aboard the Normandie for Europe and his new post in Belgrade.

Miss Corby attended the National Cathedral School and is a graduate of Wellesley. Dr. Franges, who is the son of Dr. Otto Franges, former senator and member of the cabinet of Yugoslavia, attended schools in France and England. He has been in this country for the past six years in the diplomatic service of his country, spending much of the time in San Francisco and New York City before coming to the legation in the Capital.

lard Tydings. Emilen had on a black Persian lamb coat and tiny postage stamp of a hat of black felt with a top-knot of the lamb. The Maryland Senator's wife was luxuriously attired in mink, her small brimless hat trimmed with a knot of mink tails.

Naturally, Joe Tumulty was there, as were Jesse Jones, Senator Pat Harrison, Secretary Daniel Roper and Mr. Robert Kelley. Date for sailing has not been selected, much less is the packing done—of which there will be a lot, but the Davies will leave for Moscow before the first of the year.

Clarence Grosner is very proud, and justly so, of his new den with its huge new radio. It is one of those wave contraptions on which one need turn the dial only the most minute fraction of an inch and jump from Madrid to Copenhagen.

hagen, to Buenos Aires, or Peiping. That is something, because even the most up-to-date atlas and its maps can't make the trips in less than several inches. Now, the Grosners are contemplating taking up a number of languages so that they may really enjoy their neighbors-on-the-air.

Elizabeth Sibley manages to get a lot done in a very small space of time. Not content with buzzing around socially, she has taken up the mastering of pot hooks and typing at the Temple School. This she spends hours at, along with religiously following the football games (which are near an end) at the leading colleges and universities and flying trips to her own native Rochester.

No, the fair members of Washington's younger set have not all become color blind. The reason they are feverishly hunting for either black or white evening gowns is because of the Black and White Ball Friday evening at the Mayflower. While on the subject of this gay annual party, let us modestly mention the fact that our sister city in Maryland now rates it with Baltimore's own Cotillion, which has been going on for over 200 years, and not that, but a well informed authority and one who should know in New York, picks the three outstanding balls of America as the St. Cecilia, of Charleston, because it is the most exclusive; the New Orleans Mardi Gras, as the most spectacular, and last, but not least, the Washington Black and White, which is the most polished. There, now.

The Thomas Burkes are leaving tomorrow for New York and a very gay Thanksgiving holiday. Have you ever seen the tiny ivory mouse Tom carries about with him? It seems that some time ago Anna's sister Fresia del Pulgar was visiting somewhere and sent presents to her family. Among the packages was a large, impressive parcel for the head of the Burke household. Eagerly, he started to unwrap it and continued so doing for ten boxes, each smaller than the first, and finally came upon a pill box sized one which contained the already mentioned ivory.

Home for Thanksgiving. Brig. Gen. and Mrs. George B. Pillsbury will have with them over Thanksgiving, their daughter, Miss Elizabeth Pillsbury, and son, Mr. Philip Pillsbury, who will come from Boston for the day.

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

Attractive Stenographer, Smitten With Young Man, Has Equally Attractive Rival; Asks Advice.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am a girl 24 years old and am employed as stenographer in an office with a great many others. I am considered very good looking, know how to dress and most people, especially men, find me very attractive. However, there is one trouble: There is another girl who is employed in the same office with me who is also considered very attractive, and we both seem to care for the same man, who works with both of us.

Now this young man seems very much attracted to me, paying me marked attention. But he likewise appears to be attracted to my rival, taking her out frequently. Now my problem is this—I know the other girl cares very much for the young man, as I do also. I would like for you to suggest some way in which I could tactfully let this man know the state of my feeling for him, and how I can get him to bestow all of his attentions on me, as I am consumed with jealousy as a consequence of his two-timing tactics.

I find it difficult to concentrate on my work in the presence of such disturbing conditions. I would appreciate it if you would publish an answer in your column immediately.

DISTRAUGHT.

The Thing to Do.

DEAR DISTRAUGHT: Under the circumstances, I believe it would be the height of folly to let the young man know you are taking his attentions so seriously. A business woman simply cannot afford to wear her heart on her sleeve so far as her workday associates are concerned. The situation may be disturbing at present, but it might become infinitely more difficult if you were to declare yourself, however tactfully, to the young man. So long as he continues to divide his attentions equally between you and another girl in the same office, we must infer that his interest in you is not in the least serious and that probably he would be painfully embarrassed to learn that you care for him. Such a discovery might cause him deliberately to avoid you. I advise you to guard your secret most carefully.

How can you get him to bestow all his attention on you? By causing him to fall in love with you, I suppose; or by convincing him that you are far and away more attractive and interesting than the other girl. If you and your rival are equal in looks, style and personality, I suppose your only hope of putting her in the shade is by the use of intelligence.

You might try to learn what qualities of personality or character he most admires in a girl; whether he likes her soothing or stimulating; intellectual, or, as I recently heard a man describe the non-intellectual type of girl, "just womanly," whether he most likes girls whose interests are similar to his own, or whether he is seeking one whose interests lie in a different field. And, having learned what type of girl he most admires, you might try to fashion yourself into that mold, if you wish.

I might add, however, that the less thought you give to the other girl and the more you give to the man himself—out of office hours, of course—the better will be your chances of succeeding in your ambition to cut her out. Incidentally, I believe a girl inexperienced in affairs of the heart stands quite as much chance of attracting a man's whole-souled admiration by just being herself as she does by trying to pattern herself into the sort of girl she thinks he might like. Yet some girls have got their man by using the latter and more strenuous method. So take your choice.

M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

Luxurious Crocheted Spread Is Easily Made in Spare Time

By Alice Brooks.
Pattern 5738.

COMPANION squares in filet crochet make the loveliest household accessories. A square at a time made in spare moments—time you'll never miss—and before you know it you'll be ready to join them for a cloth or scarf. As a bedspread, too, this design will be a winner. Use string—it's easy to work with, inexpensive, lovely when done, and wears like iron. If it's last minute gifts you're thinking of, use a finer cotton and make a pillow top, vanity set or other small articles that take but a few squares. In pattern 5738 you will find instructions and charts for making the squares shown; an illustration of them and of the stitches used; material requirements.

To obtain this pattern send 10 cents in stamps or coin (coin preferred) to The Washington Post, Household Arts Dept., 250 W. Fourteenth street, New York, N. Y. Be sure to write plainly your name, address and pattern number.

Stripes Coming Back.

Stripes, which have been absent from the fashion world for several seasons, come barging back into the limelight. They can be used in a variety of ways, but Orry-Kelly designers prefer to utilize them only for seasoning, rarely creating an entire gown with this motif.

Fluffy Rice Dessert.

Fluffy rice folded into whipped cream and combined with fruit is a quicker than the eye dessert that's good too.

Flowers in New Guises for Evening

A coronet of real flowers topping the crown of the head is youthful, new and smart for formal evening.

Pink sweetheart roses and lily of the valley adorn the tiny evening muffs (in lieu of gloves), of pleated taffeta.

Flowers for the hair and frock has become as fascinating and popular as the older idea of harmonizing glittering jewels.

Real Flowers Top Smartest Winter Styles

Dramatic Effects Achieved by Use of Blossoms With Costume.

By Ethel Ehlen

The Post Fashion Editor.

WITH fashions for winter emphasizing a distinct rhythm—an upward, lilted swing—real flowers are being adopted to top smart ensembles. Skirt lines, necklines and hats continue to soar skyward, and flower decorations follow them to the heights. Flowers are worn high on the shoulders, centered high at the neckline, and high up on the head.

Flower color themes are daring, according to the new dictum. They must harmonize with the popular royal blues, wine reds and glowing purples, of the coronation influence. For alluring and smart effect, flowers for the hair should be worn a la Mayfair. That is, with the patrician dignity of the traditional plumes worn by women presented at the Court of St. James. The 1937 version of this time-honored custom for formal evening, however, permits one to wear the flowers well up near the forehead, adding a regal note to the appearance. Orchids, particularly the queenly white ones, worn in this fashion, are considered ultra-chic.

Flower Jabel.

Another new and clever flower note is the elongated corsage. Usually smaller blossoms are used for this purpose—strung together in long pendants. These are fastened at the throat, allowed to cascade downward, or spread sunburst-fashion, across the bosom of the gown. To broaden and heighten the shoulder line and give a military swing to the ensemble, flowers are made into saucy epaulettes. Another dramatic flower style is the jabot of real blossoms—a cascading arrangement of flowers worn centered at the throat. This idea is suggested by stylists as a striking accent to the tailored or spectator sports type of costume.

Flowers arranged in corsages with quantities of ribbon and ferns are a thing of the past. Likewise the idea of trying to harmonize bouquets of mixed blossoms with heterogeneous colors and designs in gowns. The modern woman wears flowers with a purpose—they are part of the ensemble, not just an afterthought, pinned on in any fashion. All gowns will no longer accommodate a shoulder bouquet or corsage to advantage. The wristlet of flowers is a delightful solution—with matching flowers over one ear. Miniature roses, gardenias, pom-pom or bebe chrysanthemums are especially adaptable to this purpose.

Many Effective Styles.

A loosely woven spray of flowers, placed high on the shoulder accentuates the high-cheek-boned face. To harmonize with the heavy color of a frock, flowers of delicate coloring are advised by experts. The pom-pom chrysanthemums now seasonable, is appropriate for either of these suggestions, and is available in a wide range of shades, from palest yellow to a deep, wine red. The huge, orchid-derelict chrysanthemums are being worn this year, singly, one at the waistline (back or front), or if you want to be dramatic, atop your head. Coronets and wreaths of small

Child Forgets Facts Unless Sought by Self

By Alice Clarissa Richmond.

MRS. SMITH was a very modern mother. She believed in telling children everything at a very early age. There were to be no mysteries about the origin of life and the physiology of human kind. She began to instruct her youngsters as soon as they could talk.

At 4 the oldest daughter, Mary, was given a long and detailed biological discourse by her mother. Mrs. Smith was amazed when, two years later, Mary remembered nothing of it. For all that she had learned from her mother's instruction she might have been deaf.

There is no use in trying to tell a little child the facts of life unless it asks questions. And only the questions it asks should be answered. The answers should be short, easily comprehensible and very matter-of-fact and unemotional. The child is not ready for further information, and if any is given him, will forget it.

Older children sometimes need special instruction. For wise as the modern child may seem, he is often woefully ignorant. His sophisticated attitude is either the result of pretending to a knowledge that does not exist or of fearing to display ignorance.

The important thing is to have the lines of communication on intimate subjects kept open between parents and children. If the children feel that they can talk to their parents about anything whatsoever, and discuss the questions that puzzle them without fear of shock or disapproval, the parents need have no worry. They have a chance to guide and teach, so long as they do not become sentimental or arbitrary.

Civil Service Head Urges Clubwomen Support Extension of Merit System

Mitchell Explains Benefits of Organization in Obtaining High-Grade Federal Employees; Doubts Early Passage of Proposed Constitution Amendment.

A plea for support of District of Columbia Federation of Women's Clubs in the movement for the extension of the United States Civil Service was made by Harry B. Mitchell, president of the Civil Service Commission, at a meeting of the federation in the Roosevelt Hotel yesterday morning.

Mitchell explained the various bills pending in Congress relating to extension of the civil service, legislation already passed and the difference between the bills acceptable to the civil service and those it opposes. He especially expressed interest in the measures sponsored by Representative Ramspeck, of Georgia. He said, however, that he did not quite agree with the measures in this bill providing for competitive examination as a means of bringing the employees of many of the new Federal agencies under the civil service. The civil service commissioner asserted that more and more of the new Federal agencies are being and should be placed under the civil service. He expressed a personal preference for the method of noncompetitive examination.

Mitchell said that the campaign of the Civil Service Reform League for a constitutional amendment providing for competitive examination for civil service positions objective may be reached some time in the future but that the civil service authorities are anxious for the passage of immediate legislation to extend the civil service and that they are anxious that there be no delay waiting for the constitutional amendment.

There is a greater need just now for the extension of the civil service than ever before in the history of the country, Mitchell declared. This situation is created by the increased Government activities including the social security act. There is need for many more efficient public servants and the only way to secure them is by examination, Mitchell believes.

Mrs. Mitchell, who is a past president of the Montana Federation of Women's Clubs was present and made a short address.

There is a divided opinion on the subject of one-man street cars for the District among the club women. A resolution offered by Mrs. E. Morgan Pryse, of the Marietta Woman's Club and chairman of legislation, that the District of Columbia Federation go on record as opposing the increase in the number of the one-man street cars was amended after much discussion to read that the federation approve of the one-man street cars for the present. This decision was reached after Mrs. Harvey W. Wiley, director of the federation, pointed out that the street car company faces an adverse economic problem at present. Mrs. Wiley defended the attacks on the street cars secured from other cities for use in Washington and said that they were not second-hand cars but in excellent condition.

Mrs. J. Lloyd Biddle, president of the federation, greeted the members and presided at the meeting. Mrs. Biddle looked very smart in a dress of black crepe de chine with a white organdie collar and bow and a green felt hat.

The federation voted to sponsor the lens given in Webster Americanization School every Friday afternoon for the mothers of the D. C.

MRS. RLY CULBERTSON ON CONTRACT

Perfect Card Reading.

Tournament play, in which the contestants are given plenty of time for mapping out campaigns, produces some pretty games. The declarer's solution of the problem in today's hand, which occurred in a recent team-of-four match in New York, was a triumph of card-placing and technique.

West dealer. North-South vulnerable.

♠ 7	♥ 10 8 6	♦ 9 4	♣ 8 3
♠ A 10 8 4	♥ 7	♦ A K J 9	♣ 10 4 2
♠ K 5 3	♥ A Q J 8 4 3	♦ A Q	♣ 7 10 7 5 5

The bidding:
West North East South
1 ♠ Pass Pass 3 ♠
Double Pass 4 ♠ 4 ♠
Double Pass Pass Pass

South's three-heart bid was eminently correct, but he should have passed over four clubs, leaving the net decision to his partner.

West opened the diamond King, and the declarer ruffed with the heart Jack. He then overtook the King with the Ace of hearts, and ruffed a second diamond with his remaining honor. The nine-spot in the ten permitted the ruff as a third diamond, and dummy was then entered for the third time for a fourth diamond ruff.

At this stage, dummy's fifth diamond was established, but it should be noted that declarer was out of trumps, having used four for ruffing and three for entering dummy. But the declarer had previously decided from the bidding that a club finesse would probably lose and had figured out a more propitious line of play. Thus, with his own hand reduced to four spades and the Ace-Queen of clubs, and dummy to two spades, two clubs, one good diamond and one trump, declarer led the King of spades. West, of course, won with the Ace, and now it did not matter what he returned. He was out of diamonds and trumps and whether he led a club up to South's tenace, or a spade, he could take only one more trick. The Queen of spades would establish declarer's Jack and permit the discard of a club in dummy; a low spade would concede the fatal trick on the spot. Thus, declarer, by refusing all finesses, fulfilled his doubled contract.

Postlude

By Ray C. B. Brown.

Washington Chamber Music Society presents the Pro Musica Quartet (Bernard Robbins, Jeno Senely, Hendrik Essers and Sidney Hamer), assisted by Arthur Granich, violin, in the Phillips Memorial Gallery Monday afternoon. Program: Quartet in C minor, Op. 15, No. 4, and Quintet in C major, Op. 29 (Beethoven).

An audience overflowing into the anteroom of the Phillips Memorial Gallery attended the Washington Chamber Music Society's first "candlelight" concert of the season yesterday afternoon. One can imagine with what satisfaction the members of the Pro Musica Quartet welcomed this evidence of interest in the continuation of the good work they have been carrying on. The testimony could not be taken otherwise than as an acknowledgment of their increasing competence in ensemble playing and as appreciation of their excellent programs.

Yesterday's program offered a study in the development of Beethoven, containing the C minor quartet from the early Opus 15, and the great quintet in C major, which is not heard as often as its significance deserves. In the quartet, Beethoven was still paying the tribute of imitation to Haydn and Mozart, feeling his way toward an individual style and practicing familiarity with the technical problems of form. He was not yet ready to step out boldly in his own right, and his lack of confidence is noticeable in such a weak movement as the Andante Scherzo.

One calls the C major quintet "great" advisedly, because it is one of the works in which Beethoven announced his artistic coming of age and his entrance into what is generally known as his second manner. The change from the tentative to the positive is arresting. With the style of his predecessors he associated new harmonic freedom and a fresh vitality of emotional expression. The smoothness of the writing is still like that of Mozart, but in the content of the music Beethoven's titanic quality makes its first appearance. With one leap he left his early manner and adventured into a wider range of tonality and a deeper penetration of thought. He began exploring a tonal world grander and lovelier than the one he had known. Moreover, one finds here the beginning of that humor peculiarly his own: in the last movement of the quintet, which is virtually a dramatic scene in parlance of Rossini, his laughter rings out with gusto.

G. W. U. Eleven Must Stop Moan to Win Over West Virginia

Mountaineer Ace Triple Threat

Second Edition of Yale's Kelley; Has Formidable Backfield Company.

Intent on finishing their most successful campaign in recent years with a smashing "home-coming" victory over West Virginia Thanksgiving Day, George Washington's gridmen went into a huddle yesterday, emerging with a bevy of well-manned plans for stopping Kelly Moan, West Virginia's triple-threat ace.

Moan, incidentally, is on a mental plane with Yale's Larry Kelley, being good and readily admitting it. Nothing is more galling to him than an inaccurate pass, which he seldom throws, or having a teammate drop one, also a rarity. It was a terrific blow to him when Georgetown intercepted three of his passes and ran them back for touchdowns, and he didn't mind words telling his teammates about it.

Most Rush Moan.

George Washington realize that Moan at his best, as he confidently predicts he will be, can make it awfully embarrassing before a home-coming crowd and is determined to put the ace under the mighty Mountaineer. The line will have to rush Moan and keep him off balance and to keep his receivers well covered, just as Georgetown did.

But the Colonials also must watch Carter, Isaacs, Audio and other West Virginians who tote the ball at the mean clip on running plays. If Moan elects to run some of their worries will be quadrupled, for all of them are fast, hard-hitting carriers, and virtually impossible to stop in a broken field.

Big doings have been planned this week by George Washington's undergraduates and alumni, including a gigantic rally tomorrow night at the Rialto Theater. Pictures of the G. W.-Rice game will be shown, along with a Marx Brothers film and several other short subjects. Music by the university band and several selections by the Glee Club will be offered.

Two campus rallies are scheduled tomorrow morning in the "yard." The first will get underway at 10:30 a. m., and the second at 4:30 p. m. G street will be closed to traffic during the day and there will be a number of impromptu celebrations by students as well as organized affairs sponsored by various clubs.

Rest Is Given Maryland U. And G. U.

Richly deserving a respite from their chores after Saturday's grueling struggle, both Georgetown's and Maryland's football squads were given a holiday yesterday, and even the coaches took a day off, not even approaching within cannon shot of their respective gyms.

But Maryland, with its Washington and Lee game coming up Thursday in Baltimore, will be back in harness this afternoon, if only for 45 minutes. Coach Frank Dobson also intends to limit the Terps to another 45-minute drill tomorrow, and both will be more in the nature of warm-ups rather than practices.

This game will be the eleventh between the schools in a series that had its beginning in 1924. Each team has won five games, last year's ending in a scoreless tie. They are rarely evenly matched, numerically, as both are limited to a meager supply of reserves, but Maryland apparently has the edge in talent. Bill Borries, brother of Navy's brilliant all-American of two years ago, "Buz," is a member of the General's squad, but will not play because of injuries.

Georgetown is not scheduled to resume practice until Wednesday, and there will be another break Thanksgiving Day when the boys travel to Baltimore to witness the Maryland-Washington and Lee fracas. Friday, however, Hagersty is to begin cracking the whip and his minions will toil at a fast pace until departing for Miami and their game with the undefeated University of Miami eleven. There will be no Thanksgiving holiday for the Georgetown gridmen, as it is feared rich foods consumed at home would get them in poor condition.

Haynes Defeats Simms; Decision Is Unpopular

Pittsburgh, Nov. 23 (AP)—LeRoy Haynes, 1974, Philadelphia Negro, won a decision over Eddie Simms, 1984, of Cleveland, in a 10-round bout tonight.

Haynes knocked Simms down three times, in the first, fifth and eighth rounds, but the Clevelander came back strong, scored frequently with his left and occasionally shot a long right to Haynes' head. Simms won generous applause by his panache. The crowd booed the decision.

Representative Advocates Pay For Collegians

Thinly veiled attempts of colleges to mask their subsidization of athletics was described as "laughable hypocrisy" by former Congressman Royal C. Johnson yesterday as he advocated open payment to college football players in an address before the Washington Touchdown Club.

Freely admitting that he, himself, had received payment for playing on college teams, the square-jawed graduate of South Dakota University who retired voluntarily from Congress, declared payment to college athletes would create a far healthier condition.

"And it has been my experience," said Mr. Johnson, "that paid athletes are invariably better athletes and every bit as good scholars as the strict amateurs."

Baring his own athletic past, Mr. Johnson declared that for 18 years he has personally assisted in the subsidization of college athletes, and that in one case he knew of a college that had no compunctions against hiring two stars from a nationally prominent university for a certain game.

Mr. Johnson also declared that during his sojourn in Congress he approved a number of appointments to West Point and Annapolis. It is not uncommon, he said, for colleges to pay as much as $150 per month, plus expenses, to talented athletes.

Western Host To Gonzaga Gridmen

Many Stars to Play Last Scholastic Game in Battle Today.

Gonzaga High, twice champion of the Catholic Prep School League, collides today with Western High, which missed the inter-high championship by an eyelash. The two rivals will meet at 3:15 p. m. at Western Stadium.

The game should be one of the most spectacular engagements of the 1936 school year. Coach Orrel Mitchell, a firm believer in wide-open football with reverses, spinners, laterals, double reverses and frequent forwards, finds his team meeting an aggressive and devastating aerial game. Thus, a pair of razzle-dazzle opponents will be matching identical offenses.

Gonzaga scored an upset last year by beating the Georgetowners, 12-6, and is out to repeat the performance. Both teams appear stronger than last season, with each bringing out a flock of good backs. For the Purple, such hard runners as Jim Ellis, Jim Shaw and Sonny Hartman are outstanding while Western's two All-High candidates, Leonard Weinstein and Morris Snead, give the Red team two dangerous ball-carriers.

A number of Gonzaga boys, as well as Western players, will be closing their high school grid careers. Included in the Western line-up are: All-High guard, Phil Farquharson. All-High end, Cliff Oliphant. All-High guard, Phil Crabbe. All-High tackle, and Weinstein. The Post's All-High fullback, Western.

Ruche's 416 Set Tops Federal Bowlers

Ties Own Mark; Kuttner, Wright Shine and Green Bags Are Victors.

Unheralded among the stars of the local duckpin fraternity is Louis Ruche, of the Veterans' Administration team of the Federal League. Week after week Ruche, pitted against some of the city's outstanding pinners, has been hauling up big sets to gain the limelight as the league's most consistent pin-spinner.

The old rivals will meet at 3:15 p. m. at Western Stadium. The game should be one of the most spectacular engagements of the 1936 school year. This Morning . . .

With Shirley Povich.

Princeton can date its football rivalry with Rutgers to 1899; Harvard and Yale first clashed in 1873—but there's no argument there; the ivy-covered colleges of the Northeast United States were, indeed, playing the game when Spanish dons were swinging on the Golden Gate out in San Francisco.

But, steeped in tradition as they may be, there is none among the Eastern colleges that can point to a football feud that compares in turbulence with the annual California-Stanford rivalry on the Pacific Coast.

Did you ever see a disgruntled undergraduate pull out a pistol and shoot the winner's star after the ball game? Well, it happened out there on the Coast after the Stanford-California game of 1894 when, as the Stanford players trooped off the field victorious, a California student who couldn't reconcile himself to the loss whipped out a six-shooter and drilled not only a Stanford halfback, but a Stanford tackle, as well. He was taking aim at a Stanford guard when they dragged him away.

They took their football seriously then, these California-Stanford people, and they still do if you draw a line on them from the fact that 90,000 turned out to see these two well-beaten teams play at Berkeley last Saturday with the Coast championship having long since been lost by both.

To my friend, Archie Rice, a Stanford graduate with Herbert Hoover in the class of '95, I am indebted for the picture of the football scene on the Coast in those days just before and just after the turn of the century. Mr. Rice, a native Californian, was himself very much a part of the scenery out there on the Coast.

After graduating from the famous pioneer class at Stanford, of which Mr. Hoover was president, Mr. Rice found himself as a special San Francisco policeman during the earthquake of 1906, as a sports writer who covered Stanford-California games for 24 years and finally as a movie director.

It is Mr. Rice who tells of the great store laid by their football victories out there on the Coast and particularly of the frenzied efforts of California and Stanford students and alumni to possess themselves of Stanford's famed battle ax which has come down through the years as the most highly prized football trophy of them all.

That crescent-bladed battle ax for 33 years reposed in a San Francisco bank vault after it was stolen by California students in 1898 when four members of the varsity track team waylaid two Stanford students who were bearing the ax to the game and made off with it. Under a heavy guard each year it was brought to the field on the day of the Stanford game, and Stanford for 33 years frothed at their frustration.

Repossession of the ax actually became an obsession with Stanford men. Through the years they attempted uncounted ruses in an effort to regain their prized symbol. But the heavy guard and the armored car in which California men transported the ax from the bank vault to the field and back again defied their every effort.

But Stanford men were unceasing both in their determination and their vigilance. In deepest secrecy they hit upon a new plan that was to be put in effect on the afternoon of the 1931 game at Berkeley,

My Elsie, No 1, Beats Out Ritorno in Camera Finish at Bowie

Favorite Out Of Money In Sprint

Whichever Runs 4th; 'Double' Returns $238 Mutuel.

By Walter Haight.
A Staff Correspondent.

Bowie, Md., Nov. 23.—In a blanket finish that involved four horses, My Elsie, the property of the Shandon Farm, won the 100-yard dash at the Shandon Farm, which was the feature race at this Prince Georges County racetrack. The camera was called upon to separate the winner from the rest of the field, and the winner was judged third, with Whichever, favorite from the King Ranch, fourth. Four others completed in the 4-furlong dash for juvenile fillies.

My Elsie, a 3-year-old filly, was overlooked by the betting public and turned in a $238 mutuel. She was clocked in the slow time of 1:15.3-5, while running over a fast track.

The usual early week crowd of 8,000 participated in the sport.

Ritorno, one that turned in a victory in her first start last week, hoped to the front as the field started and appeared capable of holding away throughout. Boulevard was closest to the leaders with My Elsie, in charge of Jockey West.

Boulevard dropped out of it at the turn and My Elsie kept driving after the flying Ritorno. In mid-stretch West went to the whip to allowance came up on the inside and Whichever dashed along on the outside. Near the wire My Elsie came through with the driving finish that brought victory.

The Nash brothers, of Chicago, owners of the Shandon Farm, witnessed the victory and that of My Elsie, a $220.20 shot in the following race.

Those of the crowd who teamed Golden Vein with Nipponese fairly won a double bet to cheer. They collected a $238.10 mutuel.

Golden Vein Beats Sea Gull.

Golden Vein, at a $6.10 mutuel, added another purse to his long list in the first race, defeating a field of Maryland bred. Sea Gull was second, beaten at a head, with Flower Time third. Ira Hanford rode Golden Vein. The horse was not prominent during the early running, but came up with good speed when called on. The judges called for a photo on the finish.

Jockey Jackie West rode Prince Arthur in a half-length victory over Marfey in the second race by the simple method of rating his mount along within striking distance, then driving and taking the stretch. Third money in the group of nine went to Goldspray.

The winner paid a $7.50 proposition, beat the gate and made a runaway of the third race. In charge of Jockey J. Partridge, Nipponese fairly flew out of the gate as Starter Milton gave the signal, and although pressed by Clarion Call midway of the stretch, won in front and was won by a length. Clarion Call third, but was second with Fair Albion, the heavily played favorite, third.

Fifth to Evening Hour.

The camera continued to give outside horse the best of it. If memory serves, the picture has added a close one otherwise. From where I sat, Ironbound appeared to have taken the race by a long nose. The chart-caller was unanimous but the picture showed Evening Hour winning. At that, Evening Hour should have won by a city block, having more trouble before Jockey Nick Wall could find racing room in the stretch. Evening Hour paid a $7.00 mutuel.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—GOLDEN VEIN, $6.10, $3.40, $1.10; SEA GULL, $4.10, $2.10, $1.10.
FLOVER TIME, $7.50.

GOLDEN VEIN, kept out of trouble during the early running, rallied when abashed by midway of the stretch and then was hand ridden to the end while disposing of SEA GULL. The latter showed speed in taking command in the stretch and fought it out willingly. FLOVER TIME was forwardly placed throughout and came gamely in the final stretch. CHERRY STONE tired gradually after having a slight lead at the far turn. PEACEFUL lacked early speed and was going well at the end. BALLY BAY stopped after reaching the far turn. RIDING HIGH, off start, was turned out on the inside to press the early pace and tired.

SECOND RACE—One mile and 70 yards. Purses, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving place same. Went to post at 2:07. Off at 2:13. Two-dollar mutuels paid—IRONBOUND, $7.50, $4.20, $1.40; EVERING HOUR, $6.50, $3.10, $1.10; ALLOWANCE, $5.50.

IRONBOUND, striking distance of the pace from the beginning, came to the outside of RITONTO in the stretch and, under extreme pressure, took the decision in the final drive. RITONTO, blocked in the stretch, rallied only mildly under pressure in the closing stretch. ALLOWANCE, placed forwardly, tried to break through the field. EVERING HOUR, off slowly, rallied only mildly under pressure in the closing stretch.

SIXTH RACE—One mile and 70 yards. Purses, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving place same. Went to post at 3:36. Off at 3:42. Two-dollar mutuels paid—MISS TWINKLE, $20.20, $8.50, $2.80; PEPPER PATCH, $14.00, $6.50, $2.10.

MISS TWINKLE, not hurried during the early running, went to the leaders with a rush along the backstretch, ran MISS TIPSIT into defeat and held away to the finish. PEPPER PATCH was blocked in the stretch and rallied only mildly under pressure in the closing stretch. MISS TIPSIT, off slowly, rallied only mildly under pressure in the closing stretch.

SEVENTH RACE—One mile and 70 yards. Purses, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving place same. Went to post at 4:06. Off at 4:12. Winner, Shandon Farm's dk. b. or br. c. (2), by Sir Gallant II—Malina. Trained by J. G. West. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 0:23 3/4, 0:51 2/5, 1:18 2/5, 1:46, 1:50 2/5.

Two-dollar monthly paid—Xandra, $5.90, $3.80, $3.20; POGOARTY, $5.20.

XANDRA, allowed to settle into best stride, moved to the command when placed to drive midway of the stretch and for final sixteenth. POGOARTY gave ground entering the stretch half past the top to the two leaders and closed willingly, but unable to catch them. XANDRA, tired after running with LITTLE ARGO, ridden in front for a half and dropped out of it. WISE WILL UNCLE was through early. DROLL STORY showed a dull effort.

D. C. Building Up 10 Per Cent In Ten Months

$63,375,800 Contracts Against $57,564,700 in 1935 Period.

By Thomas M. Cahill.
With statistics compiled by the office of District Building Inspector John W. Oehmann showing an $8,811,567 gain in local private building permits.

Permits this year over the ten months of 1935, however, are better than seasonal pick-up made in Washington area building during October, according to figures released by F. W. Dodge Corporation. Total contracts awarded for the month amounted to $7,690,600, which more than doubled the $3,559,200 total for September. These figures represent actual construction contracts only and do not represent building permits.

The total of $63,375,800 in actual contracts awarded for the ten-month period of January through October this year represents a 10 per cent advance over $57,564,700 in contracts awarded during the first ten months of 1935.

These figures are given for the Washington area which covers the District of Columbia, Arlington and Fairfax counties in Virginia, and Montgomery and Prince Georges counties in Maryland. The 1935 population of this area was 672,198 persons.

Private construction, always an important class because of its effect on business in general, made a 35 per cent advance during the first ten months of the current year with a total of $45,775,800, compared most favorably with $32,296,300 in the similar period of 1935.

New Homes Up 21 Per Cent.
A substantial advance in residential construction of 21 per cent is reported by home owners catalog division of F. W. Dodge Corporation in the Washington metropolitan area. A total of $33,151,000 was made in contracts awarded for residential building during the first ten months of the current year, compared with $27,360,000 in the similar period of 1935.

Contemplated residential building in the Middle Atlantic district, in which Washington is included, and which is comprised of eastern Pennsylvania, Delaware, southern New Jersey, Maryland, the District of Columbia and Virginia, is reported by the catalogue division to have made a strong advance of 23 per cent during the ten-month period of the current year.

The total of residential building reported as contemplated during the first ten months of the current year was $187,830,000, compared favorably with $152,234,900 reported as contemplated in this class of building in the similar period of 1935.

A 2 per cent advance in actual contracts awarded for nonresidential building is represented in the $23,944,900 total for the first ten months of 1936.

Christmas Savings.
Shortly after Thanksgiving Day more than $32,000,000 will be distributed to Christmas savings clubs in the South Atlantic States and the District of Columbia. As recently noted, 12 Washington banks will pay out more than $8,000,000 to more than 77,000 club members, this sum being nearly 20 per cent larger than last year and 50 per cent above the 1934 distribution.

In the State of this group funds will be apportioned as follows:

State	Total
Delaware	$1,240,000
Maryland	4,800,000
District of Columbia	3,300,000
Virginia	8,800,000
North Carolina	1,340,000
South Carolina	2,240,000
Georgia	2,240,000
Florida	450,000
Total	$32,140,000

Herbert F. Ravell, founder and president of Christmas Club Corporation, estimates that about $335,000,000 will be paid to 7,500,000 members throughout the States. While the national average per member is $45.50, that for Washington is estimated at $60.10.

The estimated average per member is based upon a substantial number of reports from institutions operating clubs in different sections of the country. These banks estimate an increase of 14 per cent in total savings over 1935.

In the distribution of club funds this year, New York leads the States with approximately $98,500,000, while the estimates for Pennsylvania are $36,200,000; New Jersey, $31,500,000; Massachusetts, $28,500,000; New York City's metropolitan area will receive nearly $32,000,000. The Bank of America will disburse $7,000,000 in California and the Bank of Manhattan Co. has $3,250,000 for more than 80,000 members enrolled at 37 offices in Greater New York.

Statistics based on questionnaires sent to club members in the past reveal that about 50 per cent of the total sum distributed goes for Christmas purchases, while 25 per cent is applied to permanent savings accounts and investments. Taxes, insurance premiums and debt reductions account for nearly all the rest. Applied to the country at large, this would indicate Christmas purchases... 45% $119,000,000; Permanent savings... 25% 80,000,000; Year-end commitments... 12% 38,400,000; Taxes... 12% 38,400,000; Mortgages interest... 6% 21,300,000; Insurance premiums... 2% 7,000,000; Education, travel and charity... 2% 7,000,000.

Total... 100% $335,000,000. Washington banks will have Christmas savings clubs again next year. They will open for enrollments December 1 and continue to accept subscriptions until January 5.

The Market

Stocks Decline in Less Active Trading Featured by Burst of Foreign Selling.

New York, Nov. 23.—Stocks worked lower on a turnover of above 2,000,000 shares. Government bonds weakened with other securities, and the tone in commodities was duller. Dollars were weak against sterling and francs. Inquiry revealed that a large part of the stock supply came from abroad, and the strength in foreign exchange also was traced to an exodus of foreign funds from this market. Almost all the sterling offered, it was said, was bought for stock exchange firms' accounts. December wheat closed 1/2 of a cent lower at 116 1/2 cents a bushel.

Those who were disposed to worry about the possibility of a European war found more to alarm them in the week-end news, and the foreign markets also were subdued for the same reason. On the home front the news was favorable, but anxiety was kept alive over possible tightening of the credit strings by the Federal authorities.

Another increase in the steel industry's operating rate, at a time when activity usually slackens, was reported by the American Iron & Steel Institute, which estimated this week's volume at 74.3 per cent of capacity, compared with 74.1 per cent last week and 55.4 per cent a year ago. Trade reviews predicted early advances in prices, a factor which doubtless is bringing a rush of orders to the mills.

Although the foreign trade figures for October are late (a chronic condition of the Department of Commerce) a rise in exports is predicted. Shipments currently are said to be rising, particularly in automotive classifications. Meanwhile, no sign has been seen to indicate that the most optimistic predictions of a rousing holiday season will be enjoyed, something which likely has been discounted by the stock market, but which will tend to halt a price decline.

Late Selling Depresses.
Stocks weakened along those sections where strength has been so pronounced in the autumn rise. Steels, motors, metals and rails, with allied lines turned downward. Selling had largely spent itself by mid-afternoon, after a burst of activity shortly after the noon hour, but the market did not counter-attack; it merely dug in. Before it could be stopped the selling drive which sent the ticker behind.

Until the late selling the trading had been dull and price changes not much worse than irregular, with a narrow range. That indication of a lack of professional interest was largely spent itself by mid-afternoon, after a burst of activity shortly after the noon hour, but the market did not counter-attack; it merely dug in. Before it could be stopped the selling drive which sent the ticker behind.

News of the death of O. P. Van Sweringen brought some selling of the Allegheny more touchy recapitalization plan news was met with firmness in the stock. Allied Chemical broke heavily, falling points on a few shares or a vacant order book. Fairly large losses were taken by Santa Fe, Union Pacific, du Pont, Union Carbide, Bethlehem, Westinghouse and Montgomery Ward. U. S. Rubber, APW Paper, Otis Elevator and American Woolen preferred moved upward against the trend.

Credit Restriction.
Official hints from Washington over the week-end increased the uncertainties in the markets over possible restrictive credit action by the authorities. First came the Presidential reference to the excess of foreign investments and gold imports; next the markets had the virtual assurance that the SEC would move further to curtail bullish operations in the stock market, and lastly comes the intimation that something will be done to put the Federal Reserve Board into greater control of the credit market.

The latest developments indicate that what is now in the Washington mind is not so much the desire to hamper the activities of the money changers as such to prevent a rapid rise in stocks which soon or late would culminate with a bad break in which the public would be hurt and from which the feeling might spread that the country was about to experience a new business recession. Responsibility for the conditions which are proving to be so fertile for the growth of bull markets in stocks and commodities, and which threaten to touch off a great credit expansion, lies partly with the official policies.

Undervalued Currency.
Undervaluation of the dollar (granting for the sake of argument that some devaluation was beneficial) had much to do with the great influx of gold which has helped to build up excess bank reserves. Heavy spending by the Treasury and the New York laws more recently have stimulated public spending and, through the flood of special dividends to escape penalty taxes, the corporate distribution as well. Just now the stock market seems more sensitive to the

Wheat Lower On Estimates For Argentina

Chicago Expert Cables 1936 Yield Will Be 260,000,000 Bus.

By the Associated Press.
Chicago, Nov. 23.—Decidedly enlarged estimates of the Argentine wheat crop now being harvested did much to make all grain prices average lower today.

A Chicago crop expert touring in Argentina cabled that the 1936 Argentine wheat yield will total 260,000,000 bushels. This contrasted with previous forecasts by other authorities indicating the production would be about 20,000,000 bushels less.

Wheat closed irregular, 1/2 of a cent lower to 1/2 higher than Saturday's finish. December 116 1/2@117; May, 115 1/2@116 1/2; July, 104 1/2@105 1/2; corn unchanged to 1/2 down. December 105 1/2@106 1/2; May, new 95 1/2@96 1/2; July, new 95 1/2@96 1/2; oats, 1/2 off; December 45 1/2@46 1/2; May, 45 1/2@46 1/2; July, 45 1/2@46 1/2; soybeans, 1/2 up; December 13 1/2@13 3/4; May, 13 1/2@13 3/4; July, 13 1/2@13 3/4.

As for the methods to be used by the authorities to apply the brakes, some observers have jumped to the conclusion that another rise in bank reserve requirements is about to be used. Under existing law the Reserve Board could pull down excess reserves by one and a half billions, but to do so would violate its implied promise of last summer that such measures would be used sparingly, for admittedly it will be upsetting if, any time that speculation perks up on the stock exchange, the banks are to see their reserve requirements increased.

Such a development would in any event tend to be deflationary. No great change in bank investments followed last summer, but at that time the excess reserves were far higher than they are now and there was less reason to look for an end to the easy money regime. Even after the first of the year, when money is flowing back to the banks, the higher rate of commercial activity, the expansion of credit, and the higher wages and (it is to be hoped) reduced Federal expenditures will make the credit position somewhat more touchy than it was last August.

Open Market Action Favored.
It would seem to be more logical first for the Federal Reserve Board to try open market operations. The system has a large amount of short term Government obligations which mature this month. They could be allowed to run off without replacement and the consequent reduction in the system's holdings would therefore not involve positive sales, but would draw in the credit lines. In any event, replacement would present a bit of a problem. In good quarters in the financial district, the Federal Reserve Board open market operations were favored to take place before any further monkeying with the reserve requirements.

With new Treasury financing only three weeks off, the market felt it surprising that anything should be done or said to frighten anyone. While the majority in Wall Street felt that open market action was highly preferable to a direct movement toward higher reserve requirements, the majority perhaps also felt that the board would choose the later course. Likewise in stock market circles there was a strong feeling that the board again would let margin requirements Government bonds weakened all down the line and the stock market picture was anything but an inflationary one.

Radio-Keith Submits Reorganization Plan.
New York, Nov. 23.—A plan for reorganization of the capital structure of Radio-Keith-Orpheum Corporation in receivership since 1933, was presented today to Federal Judge Bondy by the Atlas Corporation, an investment company, and its associates. It was said to have been approved informally by important creditors of the big motion picture theatrical enterprise.

The plan calls for a new capital structure consisting of authorized issuance of $18,000,000 in 5 1/2 per cent convertible debentures, $11,000,000 in convertible preferred stock and 4,000,000 shares of common.

579th Dividend.
Boston, Nov. 22.—A dividend of 20 per cent, payable on all policies expiring during the period January 1 to January 31, 1937, has been declared by the American Mutual Liability Insurance Co. This is American Mutual's 579th consecutive dividend of 20 per cent or more.

United Fruit, No. American, Vote 25c Extra

Bridgeport Brass and St. Joseph Lead Also Declare Specials.

By the Associated Press.
New York, Nov. 23.—United Fruit Co. with a special dividend of $1.25 a common share, aggregating $3,565,250, in addition to the regular quarterly 15 cents, today led the year-end payment parade, which slowed down noticeably after its swift march of recent days.

North American Co., paying 25 cents extra on its common shares for a total of $2,143,854, besides its regular 25 cents, was another important addition to the list of over 200 companies which have paid some $600,000,000 in extra dividends since late in October.

Texas Pacific Land Trust ordered an initial dividend of $10 on certificates of beneficial interest and of 10 cents on subshares of the certificates payable December 21 to stockholders of record December 1.

Directors of Bridgeport Brass Co. declared a special dividend of 50 cents and the regular quarterly payment of 10 cents, both payable December 4 to stockholders of record December 18.

Among the dozen or so concerns who boosted outlays to shareholders in some fashion, or made payments on accumulations were St. Joseph Lead Co., Master Electric Co., National Bond & Share Corporation, Southwestern Light & Power, C. M. Hall Lamp Co. and the United Stores Corporation.

Standard Gas Output.
Chicago, Nov. 23.—Electric output of the public utility operating companies in the Standard Gas & Electric Co. system for the week ended November 4, 1936, totaled 108,255,903 kilowatt-hours, an increase of 10.3 per cent compared with the corresponding week last year.

Blaze Follows Juneau Slide; Hope for 7 Lost

1 Body Found in Debris, Others Missing as Fire Adds to Disaster.

By the Associated Press.

Juneau, Alaska, Nov. 23.—Flames spread through wrecked buildings beneath a great landslide here tonight and hope faded for at least seven missing persons who, rescue crews believed, were trapped under mud, rock and shattered timbers.

Only one body had been recovered. Nine injured are in hospitals. Weary, mud-smear men dug and chopped while a power shovel cut into the 100-foot wide mass which ranged from 10 to 40 feet in depth.

Four Sought in One Place.
Rescuers centered on the demolished Nickinovich Apartments which received the full force of the slide as it tumbled down a mountain side and cut a swath through an apartment house district.

Four of those listed as missing were believed to be in the Nickinovich ruins.

The body of Mrs. Gus Erickson, crushed behind a stove, was removed from the frame house she shared with her husband, who is in a hospital, injured internally. Among those who escaped harm in the tragedy was Mrs. Ruth Wenzel, 25-year-old daughter of John A. Remon, vice president of the Chesapeake and Potomac Telephone Co. By long distance she informed her parents that she was safe. She is the bride of John George Wenzel, a Treasury Department accountant, to whom she was married in Seattle, Wash., last spring.—Editor's note.

Cries Come from Debris.
Muffled cries came from the debris as rescue workers toiled through the night. The slide demolished two apartment houses, a lodging house, a two-story concrete store and several homes.

It cut off power lines, plunging the city into darkness, and disrupted telephone and U. S. Signal Corps communications.

The injured included: Alfred Bates, Gust Erickson, August Maki, Mrs. H. Lee, colored, Mr. and Mrs. Albert Peterson and their two children, Gail and Allen, Mrs. William Loft, colored.

City Built Like Staircase.
Juneau, built like a series of stair steps from the water's edge to the base of the mountains, faces the constant menace of disastrous slides. The first of the "steps" is the dock area along the shore.

The second step is occupied by business and government buildings, sloping to the third, where are many of the city's residences and apartment buildings. Back of the third step rise the mountains, where, during seasonal rains, masses of silt accumulate and often roll down the terrain pock-marked with gold mines into the populated area below.

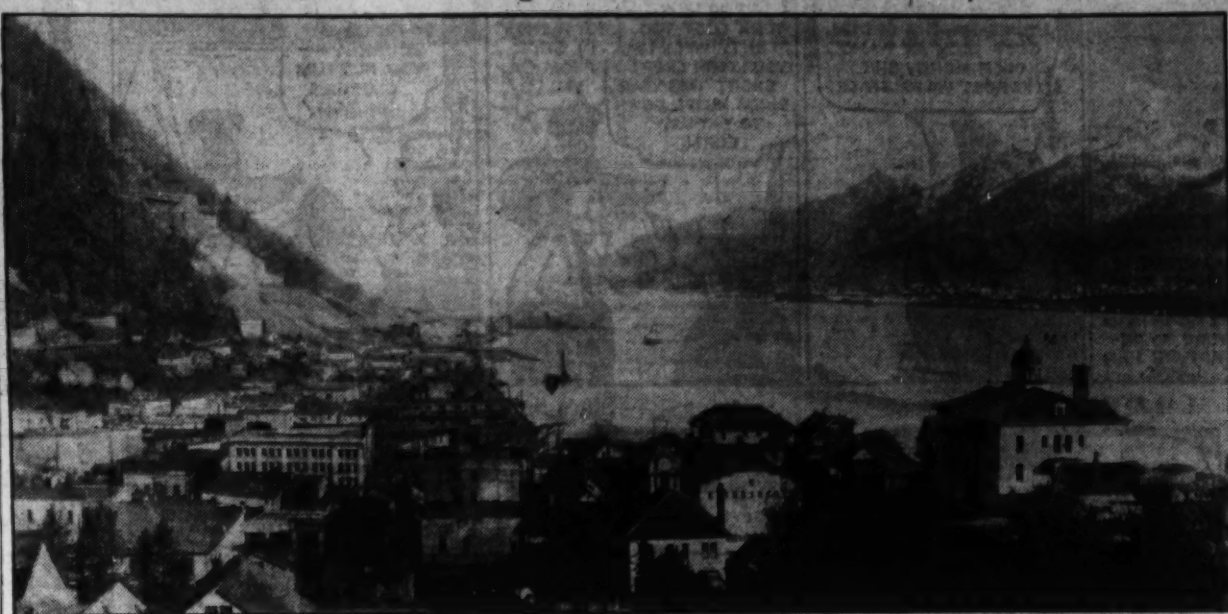

Officer Murdered; Manhunt Started
Philadelphia, Nov. 23 (P).—Patrolman James Morrow, 35, was shot to death tonight by an assailant who pumped five pistol bullets into his head and chest in an isolated gully alongside a railroad track in northeastern Philadelphia.

Mayor S. Davis Wilson, posting a reward for $200 for the capture of the slayer, summoned all detectives into action and in less than an hour one of the city's most intense manhunts was on.

One Dead, Seven Missing After Landslide at Juneau, Alaska

When a section of rain-swept mountain tumbled down on this Alaska town, two apartment houses were demolished and a number of business establishments wrecked. Body of one woman was recovered, nine persons were rushed to hospitals and seven others are missing while rescuers worked feverishly clearing away the debris.

Arkansan Denies Slavery Charges

Jonesboro, Ark., Nov. 23 (P).—City Marshal Paul D. Peacher of Earle, the first man in Arkansas to be tried under the post Civil War anti-slavery law of 1866, waived arraignment and formally denied a charge of violating the act in Federal District Court today.

Thirty witnesses were on hand to testify. Selection of a jury was delayed.

Peacher is accused of aiding and abetting in "causing persons to be held as slaves" during a cotton choppers' strike in eastern Arkansas last spring. A Federal grand jury indictment charged him, with falsely arresting eight Negroes and having them clear lands for him after they had been "wrongfully and illegally" sentenced to 30 days each on vagrancy charges.

Capitol Repair Bids Again Top Funds

Plans for air conditioning 2,100 rooms in the Capitol and its three office buildings hit a shoal for the second time yesterday when bids on the job—largest of its kind ever undertaken—ran more than $500,000 over the appropriation. Another set of bids was rejected two months ago for the same reason.

Capitol Architect David Lynn said he had asked engineers to try to bring the cost within the $2,550,000 authorized by Congress, but lowest bids for installing cooling apparatus totaled $3,131,517.

Federal Reserve Bank Loans Gain
Business loans by member banks in 101 leading cities yesterday were reported by the Federal Reserve Board to have shown another increase during the week ended November 18.

In its weekly statement, the board said "other loans"—advances to commerce, industry and agriculture—climbed $17,000,000 to $4,063,000,000, or $663,000,000 over the same week a year ago.

Holdings of direct Government obligations fell off $33,000,000 to $9,234,000,000, but they still were almost $1,000,000,000 over the same week a year ago. Domestic bank deposits increased $93,000,000.

Balances of institutions with domestic banks rose $95,000,000 to $2,505,000,000.

Chinese Claim Invaders Use Japan's Planes
Suiyuan Governor Charges Insignia Camouflaged by Mongol Troops.
By the Associated Press.
Kweisui, Suiyuan Province, China, Nov. 23.—Gen. Fu Tso-Yi, governor of Suiyuan Province, charged tonight that Japanese airplanes were employed in an invasion of Suiyuan by Mongols and Manchukuoan irregulars.

The planes, he said, during previous battles all bore the Japanese rising sun insignia, but lately were camouflaged with their fuselages painted yellow and their wings red.

Fu declared two war planes shot down on the Chahar border bore the rising sun emblem which the Suiyuanese sought to capture for "exhibition purposes." When they arrived on the scene of the crashes, Fu said, natives told them the wreckage had been hurriedly assembled and taken off toward Shanghai.

The general expressed confidence he had sufficient troops to repel the "renegades" and said his forces numbered 70,000 men with "numerous batteries of anti-aircraft guns stationed on the eastern frontier, forcing the invading aircraft to fly high."

He declined to comment on the National government's assurance of reinforcements, saying "we have the situation well in hand."

"If the enemy employs outside help," he said, "then Chiang Kai-Shek (supreme Chinese military leader) will participate."

Fu said the bandits were rallying their forces to retake the positions from which the Suiyuanese drove them. The would-be invaders, he said, numbered about 25,000 men, including "various bandits attached to the Chahar military."
